Madrid to Yield If Italians Go; Rout Continues

Fleeing Loyalists Pour Across French Border at Rate Of 6,000 Hourly

By the Associated Press.

Le Perthus, France, Feb. 6.—The Spanish government's whipped Catalonian army poured into France tonight at the rate of nearly 6,000 men an hour with Generalissimo Franco's insurgents almost at its heels.

Franco's armies were occupying Catalonia, northeastern Spain, as fast as motorized equipment could carry their advance guards.

The Catalonian conquest rolled to the French border at one point, southeast of Puigcerda, some 60 miles inland from the Mediterranean.

One advance column, flying the red and gold banners of insurgent Spain from tanks and armored cars, mounted a ridge of the Tosas Mountains at dusk.

From their vantage point these insurgents could see French troops patrolling mountain trails on the French side of the border. The insurgents paused only to cheer before pressing on toward the Puigcerda gateway into France.

Columns 12 Miles Long

Through mountain passes from Bourge-Madame, opposite Puigcerda, to Cerbere, French border town on the Mediterranean, columns of soldiers and refugees, 12 miles long in some places, retreated into France, taxing relief funds and food supplies.

The remnants of an army of more than a quarter million men which had fought Franco to a standstill in the Ebro River valley last summer laid down their arms as they crossed the Pyrenees boundary.

Most of the soldiers were weary from the month and a half of pounding by insurgent guns and bombs and disheartened by the January 26 fall of Barcelona, government capital and Spain's greatest city.

Their faces were grimy and unshaven. Their khaki uniforms were muddy and torn. Some men wore bandages. Some hobbled on crutches. Some bravely shouted, "On to Valencia!" Others were full of despair.

Civilians in Minority

Women walked with their soldier husbands. A soldier helped a one-legged comrade by carrying his artificial leg—the injured man had found crutches easier to manipulate.

"On to Valencia!" — Valencia which these men had saved by their Ebro River diversion—but the shout was not unanimous.

Civilians, continuing the same ragged processions that swelled toward France when Franco laid siege to Barcelona, now were in a minority.

But still there were thousands of them—mothers carrying babies and herding older children, old men bending under their luggage, young girls pushing baby carriages loaded with suitcases.

Foreigners Included

The more fortunate ones rode. There were peasant women on donkeys and trucks. Babies peered out from saddlebags slung across luggage-laden mules. At sunset family groups lighted fires and cooked bits of food salvaged or given by relief agencies.

Rolling army kitchens also were set up near rest camps but food supplies seemed insufficient.

At the end of the trail were concentration camps for soldiers and noncombatants and the necessity of

Gen. Franco Asked To Promise No Reprisals Against Beaten Enemies

By the Associated Press.

Perpignan, France, Feb. 6.—The Spanish government was reported ready to surrender its remaining one-fourth of Spain tonight upon obtaining from the insurgents little more than "moral guarantees."

The loyalist foreign minister, Julio Alvarez del Vayo, conferred tonight with the French Ambassador to Spain, Jules Henry, and the British Minister, Ralph Stevenson, in the police station at Le Perthus.

From other diplomats it was learned they had discussed the possibility of a government surrender to Insurgent Gen. Franco and an end to the 2½-year-old civil war.

All of Catalonia having been abandoned to the insurgents yesterday, events moved swiftly today. Tonight's meeting, concerning which all of the principals remained silent, had been arranged earlier by Premier Juan Negrin.

Negrin Changes Stand

From diplomats it was learned Negrin's stand, which only yesterday was that the government would fight to the bitter end in the Madrid-Valencia "island" in central Spain, had changed during the day.

The government was represented as willing to surrender upon receiving only these guarantees:

No reprisals against government leaders who would fall into insurgent hands as a result of mass surrenders at Madrid, Valencia, Alicante and other centers of government resistance.

Formal assurances by Gen. Franco that all Italian and German influence would be banished from Spain by the insurgents.

(Several weeks ago Gen. Franco announced no foreign power would have a voice in the affairs of a victorious insurgent Spain. The issue is of grave concern to France and Britain, who fear Italian and German military forces will remain in Spain after the insurgent military victory.)

Phone Paris and London

Immediately after the Le Perthus meeting, Henry and Stevenson telephoned their foreign offices. It was assumed the British foreign office would communicate with Gen. Franco immediately.

Another meeting of the envoys and Alvarez del Vayo was expected to take place tonight.

Earlier in London Gen. Franco was reported to have refused to accept any peace terms from the government except "unconditional surrender," and to have spurned an offer to negotiate a peace on the basis of terms reported offered Saturday by Premier Negrin, involving, among other things, a plebiscite by which the Spanish people would elect a new government.

Insurgent conquest of Catalonia, Spain's rich northeast, was complete but for the final, unresisted mopping up. The government's armies, beaten and routed, were in flight toward

Permanent U. S. Works Agency Urged by Ickes

Secretary of the Interior Ickes last night urged establishment of a permanent Federal Public Works organization as a means of preventing future economic depressions.

In a radio address, Ickes called on the Nation to realize the need for "economic preparedness" as well as military preparedness.

First Lady Likens Franco's Attitude To North's in '65

By the Associated Press.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt hinted last night that Gen. Franco should study American history before determining peace terms in the Spanish civil war.

The First Lady told members of a Parent-Teacher Association here that she had read that Gen. Franco was reported to be insisting on an unconditional surrender. Then she said:

"My mind flew back to the War Between the States. Gen. Grant exacted unconditional surrender. He gave Gen. Lee his sword and the men their horses, but immediately afterward, the victors began to use their victory vindictively and we did not have a unified country until 1898."

House Group to Ask 5,500 Planes at Once

Roosevelt Expected To Ask Vast Expansion Of Air Research

Immediate and far-reaching expansion of American aeronautical facilities must be made at once to keep the United States from falling far behind other nations in effective military air power, President Roosevelt is expected to inform Congress shortly.

His recommendations will be based on a recently completed report of a special committee on future research of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, The Post learned last night.

Stressing the imperative character of its recommendations, the special committee said, "In view of the critical condition of world affairs and the overshadowing influence of air power, it is of vital importance to our national defense to proceed with this program without delay, for on its execution will largely rest the hopes of America to excel or at least to keep pace with world powers in the technical development of aircraft."

Co-ordination Urged

The report recommends:

A new plan for the more effective co-ordination of applied aeronautical research in industry;

A plan for the encouragement of aeronautical research in educational and scientific institutions on problems supplementary to the research programs of the Government;

Construction of a second research station at Sunnyvale, Calif., and provision of additional facilities at the existing $10,000,000 Langley Field plant of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

"The Army and Navy are confronted with serious and pressing problems in connection with the technical developments of aircraft," the report states.

Foreign Progress Noted

"Other powers recently have developed aircraft of greater military efficiency . . . largely by the tremendous expansion in aeronautical research facilities . . .

"The efforts of the Army, the Navy and the aircraft industry in the United States to regain leadership in the technical development of aircraft are fundamentally dependent upon expansion of the research facilities of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics."

The NACA hinted in its annual report to Congress that the state-

Committee to Agree On $367,000,000 Army Bill Today

In virtual agreement on all phases of the President's emergency Army program, the House Military Affairs Committee will present a $367,000,000 bill to the House today.

Chairman May (Democrat), of Kentucky, said last night the committee would approve the proposal for immediate construction of 5,500 airplanes at a meeting this morning. A bill to carry out the Army phases of the half-billion defense program will be reported today, taken up in the House Thursday and passed Friday night, he declared.

The President yesterday asked Congress for a supplemental $6,723,000 appropriation for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, of which $4,000,000 would be for construction of an aeronautical research center at the Army Air Station at Sunnyvale, Calif.

$10,000,000 Contracts Urged

Acting Budget Director Bell said in an accompanying letter that space is lacking at Langley Field, Va., for expansion of committee activities and that it had been decided that the California site was the best available. Fifty acres of the present Army base would be allocated to the NACA under the the plan, it was said.

In his request, the President also proposed that the committee be authorized to enter into contracts up to $10,000,000.

Earlier in the day the House Appropriations Committee reported out the independent offices supply bill, carrying $2,180,000 for the NACA, or $480,000 more than this year. The bill also recommended $21,218,000 for the Civil Aeronautics

Roberts Vote Record Blow To President

72-9 Rejection by Senate Worst Ever For White House Nominee for Office

By Robert C. Albright.

The Senate yesterday rejected one Presidential appointment by the largest vote ever recorded against a White House nominee while another encountered heavy firing in a Senate sub-committee.

Appointment of Floyd H. Roberts to be a Virginia Federal judge was turned down 72 to 9 because the nomination was "offensive" to both Senators Glass and Byrd, of Virginia.

Thomas R. Amlie, President Roosevelt's left-wing Progressive selection for the Interstate Commerce Commission, was called a "political upheaver" unqualified by experience and philosophy for the transportation post at open hearings on the nomination.

The 41-year-old former Wisconsin Representative took the stand to deny "communism" charges preferred against him by both houses of the Wisconsin Legislature. Two Democratic members of the Legislature followed with charges that Amlie opposes the present capitalistic system and advocates "production for use and not for profit."

Meanwhile, the nominations of Dean Charles E. Clark, of the Yale Law School, to be judge of the Second Circuit Court of Appeals, and William S. Boyle to be district attorney for Nevada encountered delays in Senate Judiciary subcommittees.

Norris for Roberts

The nominations of two other Federal judges and a District attorney were approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee without dissent and the Senate confirmed the nomination of Norman S. Case to be a member of the Federal Communications Commission.

Only eight Democrats and one Independent (Norris, of Nebraska), cast their votes for the Virginia judge designated by the President against the advice of Glass and Byrd.

Fifty Democrats, 21 Republicans and one Farmer-Laborite (Shipstead, of Minnesota), voted against Roberts' confirmation. The overwhelming "no" votes included those of such ardent Administration men as Senator Green, of Rhode Island; Senator Schwellenbach, of Washington; Senator Thomas, of Utah; Senator Ellender, of Louisiana, and Senator McKellar, of Tennessee.

Guffey Against Roberts

Democrats voting for Roberts were Ashurst, of Arizona; Barkley, of Kentucky; Bilbo, of Mississippi; Lee, of Oklahoma; Neely, of West Virginia; Pepper, of Florida Schwartz, of Wyoming, and Smathers, of New Jersey.

Senator Guffey, of Pennsylvania, who boasts the most perfect Administration record in the Senate, told reporters he would have voted against Roberts had he been present, because he believes in "the right of Senators to control the

American Game Ridicules Windsor, Commons Hears

London, Feb. 6 (AP).—An American card game described as "ridiculing" the British royal family and other prominent English personages was called to attention to the House of Commons today.

Characters include the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, the Archbishop of Canterbury and historical lovers like Antony and Cleopatra.

The player holding the Windsors wins unless another player holds the Archbishop of Canterbury. In that case the Windsors are exiled.

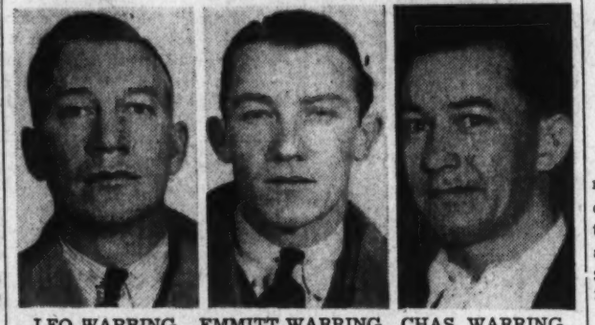
Warrings Released On $150,000 Bail in Jury Tampering Case



LEO WARRING EMMITT WARRING CHAS. WARRING

Justice Laws Hints Mistrial as He Recesses Hearing Until 10 Today

The three Warring brothers—million dollar numbers barons accused of tampering with the jury trying them for criminal conspiracy—went free on bonds totaling $150,000 last night after six hours in the District Court cellblock.

Justice Laws, who had increased their bail 1,000 per cent, said that "doubtless" he would order a mistrial of the conspiracy case when court convenes at 10 a. m. today.

The Warrings, Emmitt, Leo Paul and Charles, were freed only after an hour and a half closed conference, in which Justice Laws made their bondsmen swear to their qualifications and to the extent of their unobligated property.

Justice Laws and District Attorney Pine said they did not object to the bond hearing being public but the defense attorneys chorused vigorous protests and demanded a secret hearing.

"I certainly do object to anyone attending the hearing," said former District Attorney Rover.

Pine and Assistant District Attorney Wilson spent yesterday afternoon in a locked and guarded conference drafting contempt of court citations on the basis of four affidavits in their hands, which charged efforts to influence prospective jurors in the conspiracy case.

Halts Second Trial

The contempt investigation yesterday broke into the Government's second effort to punish the Warrings and Gordon L. R. Sadur, their tax expert, with up to two years in prison and $10,000 fine for purportedly plotting to hold out income taxes from the Treasury. The four consipred, the Government charges, to conceal huge profits from the Warrings' $2,000,000-a-year numbers lottery. The first trial ended, after three weeks, with the jury hopelessly deadlocked, seven to five for conviction.

The contempt of court proceedings, if the investigation ends in their being brought, will be by information, upon which Justice Laws will order the Warrings to show cause why they should not be held in contempt.

Such a contempt would be punishable for as long as the court might direct. It was believed not to be among the contempt actions for which the punishment a judge may impose is limited to six months in jail and $1,000 fine for each separate offense.

Tampering with jurors, it was pointed out last night, also might be indictable as an obstruction of justice, for which the penalty might be up to three years in prison.

Three Bondsmen Sign

Max and Meyer Weinstein, 406 Fifth street northwest, and Isaac Jones, of 416 Fifth street northwest, signed the $150,000 bond for the Warrings at 7 o'clock last night. The accused numbers men left through the basement entrance of the courthouse to avoid photographers.

Justice Laws announced the jury tampering charges in open court when the conspiracy trial resumed at 1 p. m. yesterday after being in recess since noon Saturday. The woman and 13 men jurors, who included two alternates, were not in court when the justice ascended the bench.

The Justice, with stern emphasis wholly unlike his usual gentle courtroom manner, said without preliminaries:

"On yesterday afternoon I was given information at my home that an attempt had been made on the part of certain of the defendants to

D. C. Suffrage Linked With Reorganization

Griffenhagen Report To Roosevelt Today; City Pledged Hearing

A promise from Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, that Washington residents will be given an opportunity, probably next week, to express their reactions to the Griffenhagen report at public hearings highlighted last night's developments in the drive for reorganization of the District government. Other developments:

The White House indicated President Roosevelt will continue to withhold appointment of a District Commissioner to succeed George E. Allen until it is apparent what action Congress will take on the reorganization plan. A copy of the Griffenhagen report will be sent the President today.

The second volume of the report to be released today, will specify in detail activities to be embraced by the 17 departments which, under the proposal, would absorb 65 existing District agencies under a city manager-council type of government.

Schools to Lead Opposition

Objections to the report from some of the independent agencies began to be heard on Capitol Hill. The stiffest opposition to consolidation of District activities under a single administrator was expected to come, as in the past, from the Board of Education.

A clash between the House District Committee and the House sub-committee on appropriations was imminent because of failure of the Griffenhagen experts to adopt the plan for shaking up the District Welfare Department recommended by Burdette G. Lewis, relief investigator, sponsored by Representative Ross Collins, subcommittee chairman.

Suffrage to Be Raised

Representative Randolph, House District Committee chairman, said he would talk District reorganization over with the President after Mr. Roosevelt has had an opportunity to study the report.

Senator King, Senate District Committee head, said he would name a sub-committee to participate in the hearings if he received an invitation from the House District Committee.

The Griffenhagen report will come up for discussion tomorrow at the weekly meeting of the House District Committee, Randolph said, and at that time will be referred to the Kennedy sub-committee.

Meanwhile, it became more apparent that the local suffrage issue will be injected into the reorganization move as William A. Roberts, former people's counsel and author of one reorganization study, urged that the governing body or city council be selected by popular vote

Witness Tells Two Hit-Run Death Stories

Grilled Six Hours by Police, Freed; Woman Gives Third Version

District police officials, faced with a major hit-run problem, last night revealed the following developments:

The case of 6-year-old Doris Dixon, hurt by an auto and left lying near her home, was believed solved.

A "witness" to the death of 12-year-old Millard F. Caldwell, fatally struck by a runaway driver, was grilled six hours after he had given two different versions of the mishap.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, held a special meeting of all inspectors, captains and lieutenants to devise means of dealing with the hit-run problem.

Girl Ran Into Moving Car

Park police were confronted with a third hit-run case early this morning. William Rentel, 22, Sharon, S. C., and Robert Finn, 30, Boston, Mass., taken to Emergency Hospital with face and hand injuries, told police they were struck down on Mount Vernon Highway near Capital Overlook.

Meanwhile, traffic claimed its tenth life this year in the District when a cyclist was killed in a crash with a street car.

The victim was Marion Wilson, 39, colored, of 407 First street northwest, who was struck at New Jersey avenue and G street northwest. Several serious accidents also occurred.

Three Different Stories

Lieut. C. T. Cox, of the detective bureau, disclosed that a witness to the Dixon accident declared the child had run from behind another auto into the rear of a slowly-moving gray sedan, believed to have been driven by a woman. The child, Cox added, had confirmed the witness' story.

The accident occurred Sunday in front of the child's home, 316 Ninth street southeast. The girl

Hit-Run Victim's Death Is Kept From Ill Sister

Sally Caldwell, 10 year-old daughter of Representative Millard Fillmore Caldwell whose son and namesake, Millard, jr., 12, was killed by a hit-run auto Friday, has lain ill of a bone infection in Emergency Hospital for three weeks. She does not yet know of her brother's death.

The infection is the result of an injury to her kneebone suffered when she fell from an automobile.

Millard was buried yesterday in the family plot at Milton, Fla.

D. C. Saleswoman Assaulted In Takoma Park; 5 Questioned

A Washington department store saleswoman, 25 and pretty, was criminally attacked and robbed by a white man in Takoma Park, Md., at 7 o'clock last night.

The man threw her over a 3-foot hedge in front of the home of Mrs. Llewellyn Jordan, at 200 Baltimore avenue, and choked her to stifle possible outcry. Then, threatening to shoot her, he forced her into the Jordan rear yard where the attack occurred. He also robbed her of more than $11.

Montgomery County Police Chief William J. Garrett took immediate charge of the hunt for the man, described by his victim as 5 feet 11 inches in height, weighing about 160 pounds; heavily bearded and wearing a dark overcoat and slouch hat. All Takoma Park officers off duty were recalled to their posts and county authorities enlisted the aid of District police.

Investigators found several of the man's footprints in the soft mud of the Jordan yard. Plaster casts were to be made of them this morning.

The woman's husband is ill and under the care of a physician. He is an official of a Washington transfer company.

Takoma Park police rounded up four suspects before midnight. Another suspect was questioned by Sixth Precinct police in Washington.

SEC Holds Insurance Firms Near Limit on U. S. Securities

A sharp rise in recent years in holdings of Government securities by life insurance companies was disclosed yesterday by Ernest Howe, chief financial adviser to the Securities and Exchange Commission insurance section.

He told the President's monopoly committee that the amount of these securities the companies can properly own is limited.

This is due, he said, to the low interest rates on Government securities and the fact that the companies have to invest their reserves in such ways as to yield a specified interest rate, usually 3½ or 4 per cent.

Howe did not venture an opinion on the point at which the limit may be reached. The 49 largest companies in 1938, he said, held $4,551,000,000 in direct and guaranteed Government securities, or more than one-tenth of the Government debt.

This figure represented 17.9 per cent of the total assets of the companies. In 1930, the companies held only $303,000,000 of Government securities, or 1.8 per cent of their assets.

SEC officials presented to the committee data intended to lay the groundwork for an exhaustive investigation of insurance companies, expected to be an outstanding phase

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

CAPITAL DICTOGRAPH: Jim Farley has told a member of Congress from New York that in 1940 he will back President Roosevelt to the limit—except for a third term.

* * * *

If he means what he says literally—as Mr. Farley usually does—this means that the delegates he will have in his vest pocket at the 1940 convention will support a candidate who has the President's o. k.

Col. Halsey

* * * *

This is highly important, because many of the politicos think that Jim Farley's attitude will be a crucial factor in 1940. Few of them are willing to underestimate his loyalty to FDR; but his aversion to a third term seems to have been growing steadily.

* * * *

One of my spies was sitting behind Senator Vandenberg on a train between New York and Washington. Glancing over the Senator's shoulder, he saw he was reading a book called "It Costs to Be President." Seemed absorbed in it . . . Don't let 'em talk you out of it, Senator.

"—where the Senators huddle"

When there's plotting going on around the Capitol, many of the huddler occur in the office of Col. Ed Halsey, the discreet and sphinx-like Secretary of the Senate. Senators buttonhole each other, drag each other into his sanctum by sleeve or lapel, try to coax and seduce each other's votes.

* * * *

They're safer in Col. Halsey's domain than in their own bathrooms. There's a legend that he once declined to say whether a certain Senator had been at a certain dinner party; thought there might be some dirty work afoot. Halsey's salary is only $8,000, and he thinks Senators at $10,000 are miserably underpaid.

* * * *

Mrs. Roosevelt came out of the front door of the White House the other day, dressed in riding boots and breeches, and climbed into a modest car with a New York license. She got behind the wheel and drove away toward the bridle paths, accompanied by a friend, through the front gates. As she reached the first right turn at the Treasury the light was red, and she stopped.

* * * *

An irate taxi driver behind her began to honk his horn, lean out the window, and yell at her. What he said sounded like "Whan, whan, whan," but what he meant was, "Why don't you turn right on the red light?" as one is permitted to at that particular corner.

Eventually it dawned on the First Lady that she might turn; and as she did she looked back and gave the taxi driver one gentle, reproachful, anonymous look.

"—tried overthrow Hitler"

FOREIGN AFFAIRS: Officials who have been in Berlin recently say that regardless of how Maxie Schmeling tut-tuts the romantic setbacks suffered by Herr Goebbels, the shrewish, amorous little propaganda minister is definitely on the skids.

It isn't merely Goebbels' adventures among the ladies that annoy der Fuhrer. It's the vivid memory of Goebbels' attempt in 1926 to supplant Hitler as head of the Nazis, when the job wasn't worth having. Now he ranks below the top ten in the Nazi hierarchy.

298 Million Budget Boost Sent to House

Committee, However, Lops $1,580,670 From Estimate

By the Associated Press.

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday recommended $1,898,512,769 to operate more than a score of independent Government agencies for the year starting July 1—an increase of more than $298,000,000 over the current year.

Despite the increase, the committee lopped $1,580,670 from some of the Budget Bureau's estimates.

It withheld the $2,038,175 appropriation recommended for the Federal Communications Commission, pending action by Congress on the President's request for reorganization of the commission, torn recently by internal dissension.

Salary Slashes Urged

The committee proposed slashing $2,000 from the salary of each member of the Maritime Commission and each member and the administrator of the new Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Salaries of these officials were fixed by law at $12,000 a year, but the committee said the reduction to $10,000 was in line with the treatment accorded members of both the Interstate Commerce and Tariff Commissions.

The net increase in the bill's total was accounted for by inclusion of a new item of $100,000,000 for the Maritime Commission's construction fund and a grant authorizing the commission to contract for an additional $230,000,000 of construction.

Among other new items was $21,218,000 for the Civil Aeronautics Authority. The agency has been operating with $14,719,935 transferred from agencies whose functions it absorbed last fall.

Labor Board Fund Increased

The committee recommended $3,189,600 for the Labor Relations Board, an increase of $234,600 over the current figure and only $40,000 less than the budget approved.

An increase of $480,000 was favored for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, giving it $2,180,000 for the year.

By far the largest items in the bill were $561,093,000 for the Veterans' Administration and $350,000,000 for the Social Security Board.

Other important recommendations were $39,000,000 for the TVA, of which $12,503,000 was designed to continue work on the controversial Gilbertsville (Ky.) Dam and $4,252,000 to start work on the Watts Bar Dam on the Tennessee; Railroad Retirement Board, $123,404,000; Rural Electrification Administration, $42,790,000; Interstate Commerce Commission, $8,908,000; Civilian Conservation Corps, $295,000,000; Civil Service Commission, $91,404,000.

The bill included $450,950 for maintenance of the White House and for the salaries of the President and Vice President.

22 Million Bill Approved

The Senate meanwhile approved by unanimous consent a deficiency appropriation bill carrying more than $22,000,000 and sent it back to the House to consider increases of some $12,000,000.

Chief changes made by the Senate were addition of $9,000,000 to meet State administrative expenses for the Social Security Board; an increase from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 for forestry work in the New England hurricane area, and an increase from $2,000,000 to $5,417,000 in a fund for insect pest control, the bulk of which is to be used in battling grasshoppers.

The Senate struck from the bill a $3,500,000 appropriation approved by the House for a Census Building in Washington.

As approved by the Senate, the bill carried $100,000 for purchase of land at the naval proving ground, Dahlgren, Va.

Civil Service Commission's Budget Raised

Appropriations Group Asks $91,404,000; Staff Expansion Urged

Substantial expansion of the administrative staff of the United States Civil Service Commission will be possible under an enlarged budget reported to the House yesterday by the Appropriations Committee.

Citing the large volume of work thrown upon the commission by the recent extension of the civil service by executive order, the committee recommended the budget estimate of $4,250,000, with $550,000 immediately available for expenditure this fiscal year.

Another $3,700,000 is for the personnel expenses of the commission in the fiscal year 1940. It compares with $2,650,000 appropriated last year. The commission's total recommended appropriation is $91,404,000, or $13,738,250 more than in 1939.

"This increase, which is spread over the entire work of the commission," the committee explained, "is for the purpose of enabling it to perform more adequately the large volume of work coming within its purview . . .

"The commission is also being called upon to perform much additional work by virtue of the promulgation of the executive orders of June 24, 1938, extending the competitive classified civil service and amending the civil service rules, and because of the expanded national defense program."

Much of the additional work, the report added, will be performed by the commission's 13 field offices.

Wallace Attends Conference of Farm Editors

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace recalled his days as editor of a farm journal when he attended yesterday the fifth annual conference of the American Agricultural Association at the Department of Agriculture here.

Presided over by Walter H. Lloyd, editor of the Ohio Farmer, 25 members of the association, composed of editors of farm journals from Eastern and Midwestern States, discussed in friendly fashion the problems confronting agriculture in their various sections, and what is being done for the farmer.

Originally scheduled for two days, the conference ended yesterday with visits of association members to various bureau heads in the department.

Secretary Wallace initiated the conferences when he came to office in 1933.

Farm Heads Here Worry as Livestock Surplus Looms

By the Associated Press.

Prospects of a surplus of hogs, cattle, poultry and dairy products in the Middle and Far West are causing concern among Administration farm officials, who pointed out yesterday that the livestock, fattened on bountiful crops for two successive years, has been increasing rapidly.

Secretary Wallace told reporters recently he feared this expansion might bring a sharp drop in hog and cattle prices by 1940.

Lower livestock prices, some experts said, probably would strengthen sentiment for Government price fixing of farm products at "cost-of-production" levels.

SEC Holds Insurance Firms Near Limit on U. S. Securities

Monopoly

of the entire monopoly investigation.

In a distinctly classroom atmosphere, Howe, with ruler in hand, pictured to the committee, by charts, the marked advance in life insurance company demand for investments and the gradually narrowing field of investment opportunities.

Investment Field Shrinking

"It is easy to understand," he said, "that, with this rate of growth, the time may come when the supply of investments of a caliber suitable for life insurance companies may become somewhat restricted."

A striking feature of the SEC presentation was the rapidity with which assets of insurance companies have risen, defying depressions. Total assets of the 49 leading companies skyrocketed from $2,876,487,000 in 1906 to $25,450,000,000 in 1938.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, Monopoly Committee chairman, declared this revealed "the extent to which the people have undertaken to build up social security for themselves."

Utility Share Rising

Investments by the 49 leading companies in bonds and notes of utility companies, Howe revealed, rose from $223,000,000, or 3 per cent of their assets, in 1921, to $3,254,000,000, or 12.8 per cent of their assets, in 1938.

Although the percentage of total assets of the 49 companies represented by railroad securities dropped from 34.8 in 1906 to 12.1 in 1938, the amount of these securities held increased from $1,001,728,000 to $3,082,000,000. The percentage decline portrays the extent to which total assets have risen.

Because of foreclosures in recent years, real estate holdings of the 49 companies aggregated $1,982,000,000 in 1938, or 7.8 per cent of total assets.

Dominate Capital Market

The point SEC officials sought to emphasize was that life insurance companies, because of their rapid growth, are playing an increasingly important role in the capital markets. Their vast reservoirs of funds, it was pointed out, cause them to be in the forefront of bidders for better-grade security issues.

Howe pointed out that the proportion of new security issues acquired by the ten leading life insurance companies increased from 10 per cent in 1930 to 62.1 per cent in 1937. In recent years, new security issues have consisted in large part of refunding issues.

Also presented was the gain in the proportion of total corporate security offerings purchased by private negotiation, thereby doing away with selling costs and the necessity of registration with the SEC. In 1938, he said, 37 per cent of the total of new issues was sold privately, life insurance companies being the chief buyers.

Reserves Not in Question

Because of declining interest rates, Howe revealed, there has been a steady decline in the percentage by which net income of life insurance companies from investments exceeds the amount of interest required on reserves. This percentage dropped from 60 in 1929 to 18 in 1938.

Chairman William O. Douglas of the SEC, in opening the inquiry, emphasized the commission was not calling in question the adequacy of insurance company reserves.

The purpose, he said, is to "survey the economic power" inherent in the vast investment funds controlled by insurance companies and "to study the impact of that power on the national economy."

Premiums Pay Expenses

The first phase of the inquiry, he explained, will relate to the extent to which mutual companies actually are controlled by their policyholders, in accordance with the theory on which they are founded.

Dr. Donald H. Davenport, special consultant to the SEC insurance section, revealed that total income of life insurance companies had consistently exceeded amounts paid out in the last 20 years. Premium income alone, he said, exceeded expenditures in all except four years of this period.

Total income of 308 legal reserve companies in time was $20,900,000,000 greater than expenditures.

Frederick H. Ecker, New York, chairman of the board of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., will testify before the committee today.

U. S. Plans Five Radio Stations to Aid Sea Travel

By the Associated Press.

The new Civil Aeronautics Authority is planning five powerful radio stations to make commercial flying across the Atlantic and Pacific safer.

A House appropriations sub-committee was told part of $7,000,000 requested by the CAA would be used for new weather reporting and communication stations on the Atlantic and Pacific Coast and a third at Honolulu.

The Authority said it intended to erect two stations in Hawaii and two on outlying Pacific island possessions.

Senate Committee To Study Overton D. C. Fiscal Plan

Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, yesterday said he will take up the Overton fiscal formula plan at the first meeting of the committee, as Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, introduced it in the Senate.

King expressed the view that the legislation should originate in the House as a revenue measure or part of the supply bill, but Overton insisted it is legislation that may originate in the Senate and said he will ask for public hearings by a sub-committee.

The fiscal formula is not a tax measure, Overton holds, but is merely a solution to the Federal-District fiscal relations problem that has confronted Congress since the dropping of the 60-40 percentage plan in 1924.

Woodrum Bill Points to State Relief Control

Virginian Proposes New Setup and Slash In Administrative Staff

Legislation marking the first step toward return of relief administration to the States and slashing relief estimates for the next fiscal year to $1,120,000,000 under a new "Unemployment Relief Administration" yesterday was proposed in the House by Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia.

Woodrum, who led the successful House fight for a $150,000,000 cut in the President's deficiency relief estimates, said he will ask immediate House hearings on his bill by a House appropriations sub-committee.

The measure would substitute the new URA for the WPA and cut administrative personnel from 37,000 to about 6,500. He said curtailment of administrative personnel in itself would make way for nearly 100,000 more persons on relief at security wages.

Harrington Offers 2 Plans

Meanwhile in Chicago, Works Progress Administrator Harrington said the WPA is studying two alternatives for keeping within the $725,000,000 deficiency appropriation voted by Congress.

Harrington said one plan involves a reduction of 1,000,000 in WPA rolls on April 1, and the other provides for more gradual reduction "but involving about 1,750,000 men."

The WPA administrator, who said he thought widespread protests would follow the cuts, indicated no decision has been reached on the method of reducing. He said an investigation will be started at once to eliminate those not actually in need of relief, that present WPA wage scales will be maintained, and that the number of regional districts will be increased from five to nine in the interest of more efficient operation.

Community Control Seen

Woodrum's proposed agency would be directed to arrange work projects "with a view to turning over to the community, as soon as it demonstrates its ability to handle the problem, the entire management and control of its unemployment relief work."

The proposed $1,120,000,000 appropriation for relief for the next fiscal year is about half of the approximately $2,100,000,000 allocated for the current year.

The bill would make $120,000,000 available to the President for expenditure at his direction on work relief, direct relief, or in cash grants to local communities.

Out of the $1,000,000,000 which would be allotted to the new URA, Congress would determine before June 30 the amounts to be expended in each State for each month of the fiscal year. The agency would be authorized to furnish relief by work projects alone, or in co-operation with States, municipalities and other local agencies.

Monthly Check Provided

Other features of the Woodrum bill:

The URA administrator must file with Congress before May 15 a statement of funds required for projects in each State during each month of the fiscal year and file each month with the clerk of the House a statement of funds to be expended in the ensuing month.

Any allocations by the President from the $120,000,000 must be reported in ten days and a report to Congress on expenditures from this fund must be made every three months.

No person may be employed on an unemployment relief project for a continuous period of more than 12 months or for more than 12 months in every 15-month period.

Politics Made Felony

Political activity by Administrative employes, solicitation of contributions for political purposes from relief workers, or threats to such persons, would be made a felony.

Administrative employes in the District would be restricted to 1,500, and in the field, to 5,000.

Cites Roosevelt Message

Woodrum did not claim his bill to be an Administration measure but pointed to the President's message sent to Congress after the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee criticized WPA activities in some Senate campaigns. The Virginian said it was in line with the President's stand that he was moving to remedy existing abuses.

Murphy Sets Up New Unit To Handle Commercial Frauds

Attorney General Murphy yesterday established a unit in the Justice Department to handle commercial frauds and other such schemes.

WOLL

Murphy said the undertaking had been assured full cooperation by Postmaster General Farley and SEC Chairman Douglas.

Brien McMahon, Assistant Attorney General, designated J. Albert Woll as chief of the new unit. Woll, a special assistant to the Attorney General, formerly was assistant State's attorney of Cook County, Ill.

Legislation prohibiting unlicensed operators to move motor vehicles in interstate traffic won Senate approval. Senator Truman (Democrat) Missouri, who introduced the bill, said it was designed to decrease accidents. The House has yet to act on it.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, proposed that Congress authorize a study by the Interstate Commerce Commission of a proposal for postalizing railroad rates.

A joint resolution by Wheeler, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, would require the ICC to submit a report by January 3, 1940. It proposed a $25,000 appropriation for purposes of the study.

The plan would establish nine railroad regions in the country, with five types of passenger service. Rates would be based on zones.

The Senate adopted a resolution by Senator Neely (Democrat), West Virginia, providing that each day's session should be opened with a prayer.

Previously, prayers have been offered only at the start of so-called "legislative days," which often include several calendar days.

Chairman Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, of the Senate Territories Committee, said he was considering introduction of a bill to grant Puerto Rico complete independence.

Two years ago Tydings introduced a bill calling for a plebiscite in Puerto Rico on the independence issue. It did not pass.

Resident Commissioner Santiago Iglesias, of Puerto Rico, said he planned to introduce a bill to incorporate Puerto Rico as a Territory of the United States.

Wartime Vessels Face Scrapping

Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, has advised Congress the commission anticipated scrapping the remainder of its idle fleet, unless used in a commercial or national emergency.

He told the House Appropriations Committee the commission would not put any of the 114 old wartime vessels on the market.

Schultz Aide Testifies Gang Paid Hines

Policy GameBookkeeper Says Tammany Man Received $500 Weekly

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 6.—"Big Harry" Schoenhaus, confessed former bookkeeper for the Dutch Schultz policy racket, testified today in the second trial of James J. Hines that the syndicate for a time paid $500 a week to the Tammany district leader for political protection.

Hines specifically is charged with contriving a lottery and with conspiracy.

Schoenhaus — Indicted with George Weinberg, another Schultz henchman, who committed suicide January 29 in White Plains, N. Y.; J. Richard Davis, lawyer for the gang and Hines—turned State's evidence after pleading guilty.

"Banks" Split Cost

Schoenhaus said the first payments to Hines were entered on the books he kept and the cost divided among the "banks" which Schultz had merged into a combination which District Attorney Dewey has claimed did a $20,000,000-a-year business.

Schoenhaus said it was Weinberg who first instructed him to take money to Hines.

Another State witness during the day was John F. Curry, deposed former top leader of Tammany Hall who has blamed Hines for his decline.

Says Police Shifts Asked

Curry testified he had received requests from Hines, as from other district leaders, for the transfer of policemen, but said he could not recall the names of specific officers submitted by Hines for such transfers.

In this connection the State contends Hines used his influence to drop members of a police confidential squad because they were active against Schultz policy banks.

John O'Brien, retired chief inspector of police, testified he received instructions from former Police Commissioner James Dolan to drop three members of the squad. The State claims they had figured in a number of policy arrests. Weinberg had testified in the first trial that he had complained against one of them directly to Hines.

Shortly after the opening of court this morning, the defense demanded a second mistrial, but was denied by the court.

Altmeyer Visions Social Security For 75% of All

Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer of the Social Security Board gave Congress an estimate today that 75 per cent of the gainfully occupied persons in the Nation eventually would be covered by the social security system.

In testimony, before a House subcommittee considering the independent offices appropriation bill, Altmeyer asserted about 40,000,000 beneficiaries were registered under the social security act.

He added the number was increasing by about 20,000 daily and predicted that there would be some expansion for the next 40 years.

Industry Plans Homes to Cost But 50c a Day

Lumbermen, Builders Offer Scheme in Reply To Federal Program

A plan for new homes to cost only 50 cents to $1 a day was presented to the nation's "ill-housed third" by the lumber industry yesterday.

The dwellings, of one and two-story construction, would not be of one standard design but would have a dozen architectural variations.

They would cost from $2,000 to $2,500 each.

Acting jointly, the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association and the National Retail Lumber Dealers' Association said they were opening the door to a new era in low-cost housing as a reply to accusations that private industry was unable "to build adequate shelter" for the low-income group.

James G. McNary, president of the lumber association, said the two groups had obtained co-operation of leading manufacturers of building materials and equipment, housing research foundations, architects, home economists and building experts. They will conduct a national small homes demonstration in "hundreds" of communities.

The one-story house contains a living room, two bedrooms, kitchen and bath. The two-story structure has a living room, dining room and kitchen on the first floor and two bedrooms and bath on the second. A built-in garage is included in the latter plan.

Don A. Campbell, president of the retail lumber dealers, said 23,000 dealers will co-operate. He declared the charge that private industry had failed to provide adequate low-cost housing "has been the excuse used by the Federal Government to invade this field with subsidized operations" and that the industry would "meet the challenge."

Meanwhile, the HOLC told Congress that an upswing in private residential construction had complicated the corporation's task of disposing of repossessed homes.

Chairman John H. Fahey, in testimony before the House Appropriations Committee just made public, said the HOLC, in striving to sell homes it has taken over, was meeting competition from newer and more modern homes.

The problem was intensified, Fahey said, "by the fact that prevailing terms for the purchase of new homes are the most liberal that have ever been offered in this country."

He disclosed that the HOLC had repossessed 118,765 properties, representing about 11.7 per cent of the original loans and had sold 32,152.

Peace, Justice U. S. Policy, Says Hornbeck

Hull's Adviser Tells Wisconsin Alumni Foreign Aims

Peace with justice is a cardinal principle of the foreign policy of the United States, Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, State Department adviser on political relations, declared last night.

"The peace desired by the American people," he stated at the founders' day dinner of University of Wisconsin alumni, "is not the passive state of individuals who are willing to yield anything just to be let alone."

Emphasizing that the conduct of American foreign relations is designed to assure equality of opportunity to citizens of the United States wherever they may be, he said, "We try to promote human welfare all over the world and thus aid the cause of peace."

Alluding to the recent outcry over President Roosevelt's reported statement that the United States' frontier was in France, he said, "I am glad the matter has been dramatized whether the President made the statement or not."

Regardless of our beliefs, he added, "we must recognize that the British Empire lies between us and two systems we do not like.

"Therefore, we should face the situation and evaluate it in the light of reality."

Dr. Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, was another speaker.

Among the honor guests were Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer, of the Social Security Board; former Senator Lenroot, of Wisconsin; John W. Bennett, president of the Wisconsin State Society; Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, and Representatives Johns, Murray and Keefe, of Wisconsin. George E. Worthing, president of the Wisconsin Alumni Association here, presided.

$450,000 D. C. Playground Plan Revealed

Park Commission To Buy New Sites, Expand Old Facilities

Almost half of a $1,000,000 appropriation for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission will be used to buy sites for playgrounds in congested areas of the District, the House Appropriations Committee report disclosed yesterday.

Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the commission, said the commission is turning its attention this year to areas "where tuberculosis and juvenile delinquency flourish to a high degree and traffic accidents are numerous," and will spend $450,000 for playground sites.

He complained, however, that the Budget Bureau had cut the commission's estimate of $2,000,000 in half.

Slum Clearance Provided

The independent offices supply bill also carried $2,000,000 for continuation of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial and authorized the Alley Dwelling Authority to use an unexpended balance of $11,959 and anticipated receipts from rents of $44,000 to augment an expected loan of $2,000,000 from the Treasury in carrying out its slum clearance program.

The Park and Planning Commission's appropriation also will be used in part to acquire several stream valleys for park areas and to co-ordinate with flood control projects in this vicinity.

The $1,000,000 appropriation is made under the Capper-Cramton act, which authorized the Federal Government to lend up to $16,000,000 to the District for park extensions. Twenty-three projects are planned for the next fiscal year, of which 16 will be completed, the report said.

Cites Traffic Menace

Delano told the House sub-committee during executive hearings, which were disclosed with the reporting of the bill, that the commission had taken cognizance of the public demand for more playgrounds in the congested areas as a means of averting traffic accidents to children.

Existing playgrounds, where inadequate, will be expanded, he said. Among those mentioned are the Columbia Heights recreation center, the Midcity Playground, the Southwest Recreation Center and the Congress Heights and Barry Farm playgrounds.

Rehabilitation Spurred as Ohio Recedes

'Big Safety Margin' At Louisville Abates Fear in Lower Valley

Cincinnati, Feb. 6.—The Ohio River fell slowly from flood crests along nearly half its length tonight and Weather Bureau assurance of a "big margin of safety" for Louisville, Ky., lifted fears in the lower valley.

Light rain fell, but rehabilitation work went ahead as thousands of refugees in hardest-hit Eastern Kentucky and West Virginia returned to mud-strewn abodes. Health conditions remained good.

The crest moved upon Cincinnati tonight, where the stream topped 57 feet—5 feet above flood—and crawled toward its indicated top tomorrow of 58 to 59 feet.

All points east of Vanceburg, Ky., reported a recession of the tide. It was falling at Ashland, Ky., after a crest of 60.6 feet, 10 feet above flood, and at Maysville, Ky., slowed to a rise of only .05 feet hourly.

Meterologist J. L. Kendall said at Louisville that with an anticipated top of 34 feet, 6 feet above flood, the city had a "big margin of safety." A stage of 45 feet would cause major disaster although it went to 57.1 feet in the record 1937 flood. Cincinnati's crest then was 79.99.

The American Red Cross in Washington estimated almost 10,000 families in five States were affected by floods.

Information at headquarters reported 1,037 families affected in Tennessee and southeastern Kentucky; 4,475 in central and eastern Kentucky; 2,175 in Ohio; 2,015 in West Virginia and 75 in Indiana.

Thirty-eight national disaster workers have been sent into the flood areas, Red Cross officials said.

The Indianapolis Weather Bureau reported conditions along the tributary White and Wabash rivers were "not so bad." A crest only 4 feet above the 40-foot flood mark was forecast for Cairo, Ill, at the mouth of the Ohio, for the week-end.

1,500 Families Aided

As up-river cities named "mop-up" squads to clean away debris, WPA crews within the general Cincinnati area.

Newport, Ky., police reported close to 1,000 families had evacuated low-lying homes across the river from Cincinnati and the river-front village of California, 20 miles east, was "deserted." Dayton, Ky., prepared to care for 200 persons.

WPA trucks moved between 250 and 300 families from homes in Moscow, Neville, New Richmond and Manchester, a few miles up-river.

Insurance Firm Held Liable for $125,000 Loan Here

Responsibility for a $125,000 first trust loan on a Washington apartment house must be borne by the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., which made the investment without due investigation, the United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday, reversing an earlier decision of the District Court.

The appellate decision stated the insurance company based its investment on an unauthorized release to Rose G. Casey, once owner of the apartment house, on an indebtedness against the property.

The court held that holders of the notes for the Casey debt neither actually nor apparently authorized the investment company to act as their agent and that hence the company had no authority to release the original owner.

Key Bridge Open, No Jams Reported

At the end of the first day that Key Bridge was opened to all types of traffic, police yesterday declared there had been no jams and no detouring even during the rush hours.

But it was announced by the Bureau of Public Roads that if traffic became too heavy some might have be routed by the Arlington Bridge and the George Washington Parkway.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life.

Court Accepts Test of Hague CIO Challenge

Holds Up Injunction Against N. J. Denial Of Right to Assemble

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court will review the long fight between Mayor Frank Hague and the C. I. O. over the latter's attempt to hold public meetings in Jersey City

The tribunal agreed yesterday to take jurisdiction and ordered that an injunction issued against Hague and other Jersey City officials by the Federal Circuit Court at Philadelphia be inoperative pending a final decision. Arguments were set for February 27.

Hague appealed from the injunction, which was granted to the Committee for Industrial Organization (now the Congress of Industrial Organizations) and the American Civil Liberties Union.

Liberty Challenge Denied

The latter organizations joined in asking the Supreme Court to hear the appeal. They pleaded that "the issues involved are of paramount national importance."

Hague asserted that the circuit court, in ruling unconstitutional a city ordinance under which Daniel J. Casey, director of public safety, had denied permits for public meetings, had misinterpreted a decision by the high tribunal in 1888.

The mayor said "this case in no aspect involves the right to speak, assemble or meet freely."

"The sole issue . . ." he continued, "is the extent to which public streets and places shall be made a forum for large gatherings of persons upon particular occasions."

"American Way" in Peril

The C. I. O. and the Civil Liberties Union said the issues "go to the roots of the democratic and the American way of life."

Asserting these have been "challenged in various parts of the country by tactics of official suppression," their petition continued:

"In the case at bar, these tactics were not denied and are still defended by petitioners under a claim of constitutional right. There is pressing need that this claim should be rejected with the utmost clarity and finality."

U.S. Aide, Now Dead, Named in Torrio Tax Case

W. H. Boyd, Suicide in Maryland, Accused of Conspiring With Gang

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 6.—A former special assistant to the U. S. Attorney General, now dead, was named today as having conspired with Johnny Torrio, former Chicago gangster, and others to defraud the Government of income taxes due from Torrio.

The one-time official took his own life by hanging last November 9 at Piney Point, Md. He was referred to in the indictment as a "co-conspirator, but not herein indicted because he is now deceased."

Torrio and four others were indicted by a Federal grand jury on two counts of violating the income tax laws and one charging conspiracy.

Named with Torrio, who has the doubtful distinction of having taken Al Capone to Chicago, were his brother-in-law, William Slockbower, White Plains, N. Y.; John D'Agostino, of Egg Harbor City, N. J.; Louis G. Lacava, of Staten Island, and James La Penna, of Valley Stream, N. Y.

Torrio's income tax affairs have long been under investigation and the indictment opened today supersedes two earlier ones returned against him in 1937.

The indictment charges in the conspiracy count that the defendants "did conspire, confederate and agree together and with each other and with William H. Boyd, of Washington, D. C.

Trial was set for March 7.

Torrio's income as set forth in the indictment was $145,262.95 for 1933; $74,932.78 for 1934, and $96,129.11 for 1935, a total of $316,324.84 for the three years.

Martin Charges CIO Conspiracy To His Enemies

Court Petition Asserts Effort Was Made to Give Lewis U. A. W. Control

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Feb. 6.—Homer Martin, defendant in one injunction suit seeking to deprive him of his authority as president of the United Automobile Workers, retaliated today with a court petition charging his enemies with two conspiracies to give control of the union to the Congress of Industrial Organizations and to the Communist Party.

His petition disclosed for the first time details of a tentative agreement with the Ford Motor Co. for partial recognition of the union which, he contends, was canceled because of the factional fight within the union.

The petition named as defendants 15 U. A. W. A. executive board members who were suspended by Martin last month and who subsequently impeached him.

It alleged they entered into a conspiracy with John L. Lewis and other officials of the C. I. O. to "destroy the U. A. W." and "unlawfully appropriate and divert to the C. I. O. and to themselves" the U. A. W. membership, funds and property.

The petition alleged the Communist conspiracy originated with Windham Mortimer and Ed Hall, suspended vice presidents; George Addes, suspended secretary-treasurer, and Walter Reuther, president of the Detroit West Side local.

Circuit Judge Guy E. Miller set February 14 as the date of a hearing to show cause why the defendants should not be restrained from acting as governing officials of the U. A. W.

Chamberlain Pledges Paris Solid Support

Rome Press Replies 'Violent Situation' May Result

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 6.—Prime Minister Chamberlain pledged before a cheering House of Commons today that any threat to "the vital interests" of France would find Britain solidly behind her World War ally.

In what seemed a plain warning to Italy that she could not press her colonial claims against France to the point of war without bringing all the forces of Britain to France's aid, Chamberlain said in reply to a question based on a statement by French Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet:

"According to my information, Bonnet's statement in the (French) Chamber of Deputies of January 26 was that in case of a war in which the two countries were involved all the forces of Great Britain would be at the disposal of France just as all forces of France would be at the disposal of Great Britain.

"This is in complete accordance with the views of the British government.

"It is impossible to examine in detail all the hypothetical cases which might arise, but I feel bound to make it plain that the solidarity of interest by which France and this country are united is such that any threat to the vital interests of France, from whatever quarter it came, must evoke the immediate co-operation of this country."

The Prime Minister's statement apparently envisaged a large British expeditionary force being sent to the continent as in the World War, in addition to air and naval assistance.

Fascists Make Reply

Rome, Feb. 6 (AP).—Adolf Hitler's storm troop chief, Viktor Lutze, started today on a tour of Italian Libya's frontier with French-controlled Tunisia while the Fascist press warned Britain that rejection of Italy's "natural aspirations" would result in a "violent situation."

"The British government," said Il Giornale d'Italia after Prime Minister Chamberlain had reaffirmed Anglo-French solidarity in the House of Commons today, "knows very well that Fascist Italy intends to pursue her natural aspirations to their just realization.

"It is possible then to suppose the government, and Chamberlain in particular, contemplate the alternative of a violent situation and collapse of all British home and foreign policy?"

The trip will take Lutze to Gadames, on Libya's frontier with Tunisia, and will keep in the foreground the promise Chancellor Hitler made, in his January 30 Reichstag address, to aid Italy in event of war.

China Using Credit In U. S. to Build Nation in Interior

China is building a new nation in the interior of Asia beyond immediate reach of Japan, utilizing the $25,000,000 credit extended her in December by the American Export-Import Bank.

Retreating natives carried machinery with them to cities virtually unknown to the Occident. Now they are buying more machinery in the United States.

Between 1,000 and 2,000 freshly ordered trucks will be used to connect China with the sea over the new 2,000-mile road to Burma.

ment on research needs would be extremely significant.

It stated, "The advances in aeronautical science are so rapid that assiduous attention to the subject cannot with safety be suspended for even a brief period . . . It is not only good policy from a financial consideration, but also vital from the standpoint of national defense, that American aircraft have a performance equal or superior to that of a potential enemy. This principle necessitates serious consideration of American aeronautical research and experimental facilities."

The report on future research, now on the President's desk, was signed by the full membership of the investigating committee, composed of Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, chief of the Bureau of Naval Aeronautics, chairman; Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps; Edward J. Noble, chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority; Dr. Edward P. Warner and Dr. George W. Lewis, member and director of aeronautical research, respectively, of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

Authority or $6,510,000 more than at present.

Officials of the National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics told the committee recent studies have indicated that airplanes can be built to fly at speeds of more than 500 miles an hour. The fastest speed now on record—420 miles an hour—was recently made abroad, it was stated.

Reich's Claims Questioned

Questioned as to reports that Germany was capable of producing 1,000 planes a month, Dr. George W. Lewis, research director of the advisory committee, declared that 600 to 800 planes monthly was the Reich's capacity.

Chairman Noble of the Civil Aeronautics Authority told the committee there would be no difficulty in obtaining candidates for the proposed program under which 20,000 youths are to be trained as pilots. Ten million dollars will soon be asked to put the plan into effect as a part of the defense program, he said.

Describing the plan, which he said would have "the same appeal as Hollywood" for American youth, Noble declared it would not be limited to college students, as heretofore indicated. Anyone between 18 and 25 and who has $25 for a laboratory fee may enroll, he declared. However, only candidates with two years of college credit will be accepted for further training by the Army.

An expected Senate flare-up over foreign policy failed to materialize yesterday as that body met for only an hour and then adjourned until Thursday.

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, outspoken critic of the President's efforts to aid British and French rearmament, charged "these long recesses are an evidence of a desire to see if this thing won't drift itself out." He declared his bloc would keep the subject alive "until there is clarification of the President's foreign policy."

From two other members of the Senate, however, came support for President Roosevelt's foreign policy. Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, said the President's four-point declaration at his press conference last Friday satisfied him and must be accepted as controlling.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, said he "did not care" what went on at the secret White House conference with the Senate Military Affairs Committee last week. The program announced Friday, he continued, "is the one I'm going by, and I agree with it all the way."

At the White House conference the President discussed foreign policy at some length. As conflicting reports of the conference "leaked" out, a storm of controversy arose and on Friday the President stated that his foreign policy had undergone no change. He dictated a statement emphasizing intention to avoid entangling alliances, promotion of free trade for all nations, reduction of armaments, and American sympathy to peaceful maintenance of independence of all nations.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, declaring he approved the latter policy in the statement, said last night that he considered it "a retreat" from the position the President had outlined to the committee, judging from what some members had told him of the conference.

Senate Republican Leader McNary, of Oregon, told reporters he expected the debate to be resumed Thursday. He indicated one reason for holding off yesterday was the absence of Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho. Borah has been ill, and Republican leaders wish to consult him before taking a stand.

In a long statement to reporters, Senator Nye demanded to know "how far we are going in a direction that involves aid to belligerents." He accused the Administration of giving "military advantages" to foreign nations over the protests of the Army General Staff. Publication of testimony before the Senate Military Affairs Committee, which has been investigating the sale of military planes to France, will show this to be true, he asserted.

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, declared he fully supported the President's four-point foreign policy. He said that he would defend the Administration if it were "successfully attacked" on this point, but that so far he did not consider the situation "warranted a defense."

Obsolescence Feared

During the House Military Committee's consideration of the defense program, the only conflict, members said, has been over the plan to procure the additional planes in from 18 to 24 months. Some members urged that the program be extended over three to four years to prevent all of them becoming obsolete at once.

At a secret conference Sunday night, the Republican members agreed to back this move, and urge that the new authorized strength be set at 5,500 instead of 6,000 as proposed in the May bill.

As the President's recommendation had been for "a minimum of 3,000 additional planes" over the existing authorization of 2,320, May said, there was no objection to reducing the limit in the bill to 5,500. It is expected the modification will make the number of airplanes to be procured dependent upon the $300,000,000 provided for this item in the President's program, with the price per plane fixing the total number.

Personnel Boost Provided

The bill to be reported by the committee today also provides for training of pilots in civilian schools, increase in strength of the Army to 16,719 officers and 200,000 enlisted men, expenditure of $23,750,000 for augmenting Panama Canal defenses and $32,500,000 for "educational orders" to industry.

Norris Charges Politics

Meanwhile, Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, joined Senator Pittman in a charge that critics of President Roosevelt's foreign policy are trying to injure him politically.

"They are thinking mostly about 1940," Norris declared. "They want to keep Roosevelt or anyone favorable to him from being nominated for the Presidency. It is a very dangerous thing."

Loyalist Arms Seized by France

Paris, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—The French foreign office, declaring the Spanish loyalist government to be "temporarily non-existent," tonight announced the seizure of 800 freight cars loaded with salvaged war materials which the loyalists sought to transfer from Catalonia to the southern Madrid-Valencia zone.

France regards the loyalist government as being non-existent, it was announced, so long as Premier Juan Negrin and his ministers who fled to France remain on French soil as refugees and do not return either to Madrid or Valencia to re-establish the government.

Negrin and his ministers were warned they would not be permitted to function as a government while they remain on French soil.

Italy's Army Law Revised, Duce Says

Rome, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Premier Mussolini tonight told the supreme defense council Italy's military and neutrality laws have been completely revised and "thus we have complete military legislation of which no other country can boast * * * which we can apply at a moment's notice."

Refugees

choosing between insurgent and loyalist Spain for repatriation.

The flood of refugees, now two weeks underway, neared the 100,000-mark tonight.

Hundreds of Spanish cavalrymen, mounted police and assault guards rode their horses, mules and burros into France.

Only a few Spanish peasants were lucky enough to bring along their livestock. Most of their cows, sheep and goats had been slaughtered for food.

Along the mountain road French mobile guardsmen stood at 25-yard intervals, shepherding the refugees. More than 100 units of the French Army's motorcycle machinegun corps patrolled the frontier zone.

Squads of French infantrymen with fixed bayonets went into the woods a hundred times through the day to break up camps of Spaniards in the Pyrenees foothills. Military planes patrolled the frontier, spotting the camps and messaging their positions.

Somewhere in the streams of beaten men were several thousand members of the International Brigade, mustered out of the Spanish Government ranks before the fall of Barcelona, but caught in the Catalonian rout.

French frontier guards made no attempt to separate foreigners from Spaniards. They left that to troops and mobile guardsmen at the Argeles concentration camp and to the international military commission of the League of Nations supervising the withdrawal of foreigners.

At least three of nine Americans, known yesterday to be in Catalonia, came out.

Exchange offices did a big business. A 100-peseta note, issued during the war by the loyalist regime, was worth one franc this morning. By afternoon it took 500 paper pesetas to buy a franc ($.026).

Paper pesetas issued by the government before the war, however, were officially recognized at Burgos, seat of the insurgent government. The 100-peseta notes of prewar issue could be exchanged for 2½ francs.

Wounded Crowd Depots

"It is a terrible risk," said the manager of an exchange.

"I have hundreds of millions of pesetas now. Maybe the whole lot will not be worth a franc tomorrow if the insurgents change their minds."

Before sundown several hundred French soldiers went into the border hills with mule-drawn wagons to gather firearms abandoned on French soil by Spanish soldiers.

All French peasant and village families in the border zone were warned to keep their children indoors until the retreat was over, because of the large number of unexploded hand grenades thrown away.

The frontier echoed all day to shots fired by Spanish soldiers at birds, stones and tin cans to exhaust their ammunition before they laid down their arms.

Spaniards wounded on war fronts and in bombardments behind the lines crowded first-aid stations and hospitals along the border.

Several thousand wounded were transferred on trains under the care of French army physicians from the frontier zone to hospitals in central France.

Irish 'Terror' Delays Kents' Belfast Visit

Bizarre Bomb Plot, Sabotage Conspiracy Described in Court

By the United Press.

London, Feb. 6.—An alleged plot by the outlawed Irish Republican Army to spread destruction over the British Isles by bombings and arson at some time when international troubles are brewing and "the potential panic of the people can be exploited fully" was revealed today in Bow Street Police Court.

[Official announcement was made of the postponement until later in the year of the projected visit March 7 of the Duke and Duchess of Kent to Belfast, Northern Ireland, the Associated Press said.—Editor's note]

The plot disclosure was made by Prosecutor G. B. McClure when 12 men, most of whom have Irish names but live in the London area, were charged with terrorism. They were held for trial and removed to Brixton Prison under heavy guard.

Bizarre Plot Read

Bizarre and ingenious methods of sabotaging Britain's military, naval and air strength were contained in the plans, according to the contents of an "S-plot" which was read to the court.

Even while the hearing of the 12 men was going on, a new threat to blow up the Bow Street court, famous for centuries, was telephoned to the court officials.

The prosecutor announced that, in addition to the 12 men, a man of "considerable importance" in the Irish Republican army had been seized by Scotland Yard. He refused to identify the prisoner.

Royal Family Guarded

The series of bombings which began three weeks ago has resulted in extraordinary guards being posted around the royal family, Prime Minister Chamberlain and almost every minister. It also caused the closing to the public of the House of Parliament, Westminster Abbey and other buildings.

The so-called "S-plot" of the Irish Republicans, who are demanding withdrawal of British troops and officials from Northern Ireland and the merger of Ulster and Eire in an all-Ireland republic, told of plans for starting fires by such methods as acid-filled balloons.

'No Reprisals' Pledge Asked Of Gen. Franco

Spanish

France. Further resistance in central Spain, still government-held, was problematical.

Against this background, Britain and France were described authoritatively as co-operating to prevent "needless bloodshed."

With bitter dissension among his ministers, Negrin was faced with the choice of capitulating on Franco's terms or of carrying on against seemingly hopeless odds.

He was said still to have the support of army and trade union leaders.

Spanish President Manuel Azana and some other members of the government had been attempting to convince him that continued warfare in the central zone, which includes Madrid, Valencia and Alicante, only would subject its population to death by hunger or slaughter.

Azana, who crossed into France yesterday, has set up his headquarters at the little French village of Collonges-sous-Saleve, on the Swiss frontier just across from Geneva.

The developments today followed five days of fruitless conversations by French and British representatives with insurgent authorities at Burgos in attempts to arrange a truce and, possibly, later negotiate a peace on Negrin's "three points."

Negrin wanted:

A guarantee that Spain would be freed of foreign influence.

Establishment of a government desired by all the people and selected through a plebiscite.

Liquidation of the war to permit all Spaniards to join in the reconstruction.

Franco refused flatly even to discuss anything but outright and unconditional government surrender.

"I'LL LOOK FOR YOU AT THE HOUSE FOR America's Card Party
ON FEBRUARY 14th"

Forget business matters on St. Valentine's Day and join in one of the hundreds of card parties being held throughout Washington to raise money for a permanent blood and serum bank for Children's Hospital.

The need for this blood "bank" is vital. It will pay big dividends in the form of saved lives, preventing needless suffering for youngsters, and improved health for thousands of children in this community and vicinity.

Hold one of these card parties in your own home. Invite all your friends. Each person who attends the party buys a ticket for $1. The entire proceeds from your party—and from hundreds of other such parties—will be turned over for the establishment of a permanent Blood and Serum Bank at Children's Hospital. Not one cent will be deducted for overhead. If you want more details, call NAtional 4200, Extension 326.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.
Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

FCC Assailed As $2,000,000 Is Withheld

Wigglesworth Charges McNinch With Trying To Avoid Investigation

The first blast at proposed reorganization of the Federal Communications Commission into a three-man agency was loosed in the House yesterday simultaneously with action of the House Appropriations Committee in withholding a requested appropriation of $2,000,000 for the commission until the reorganization question is decided.

Representative Wigglesworth (Republican), of Massachusetts, reviewed the "purge" of the FCC staff of last fall by Chairman Frank R. McNinch and charged that the chairman now is attempting to set up a centralized administration and to avoid a Congressional inquiry.

The transcript of House sub-committee hearings on the FCC budget also disclosed that members questioned McNinch at length regarding the "purge," his efforts to exempt FCC employes from the civil service and his views on such controversial radio issues as newspaper ownership, license transfers and the telephone report.

Charges Centralization

Regarding the proposed three-man commission, about which McNinch and Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, have conferred, Wigglesworth, after citing articles in The Washington Post regarding the "purge," said:

"As the record stands in conjunction with the pending proposal for a three-man commission, it has every appearance of an attempt to abolish the commission as we have known it and to substitute a more centralized administration, possibly in the hope of avoiding an investigation."

Wigglesworth, who has introduced a resolution calling for investigation of the FCC, recalled he had asked McNinch at the executive hearings about a story in The Post December 7 to the effect that legislation was being drafted to abolish the FCC in favor of a three-man agency.

Cites "Favoritism" Reports

He pointed out McNinch denied knowledge of the article and stated he had not read it. It was recalled, however, that the day after publication of the story, McNinch issued a formal statement denying any move to abolish to FCC or reduce it to a three-man agency.

Wigglesworth charged that the FCC under McNinch has made no progress in attaining objectives of the communications act, including elimination of monopolies, "private ownership" in radio frequencies, and trafficking in licenses.

"On the contrary," he said, "regulation has been conducted in large measure without definite policy and under charges of favoritism, politics, and worse."

Warrings Freed on $150,000 Bail After Jury Tampering Charge Halts Trial

Warring

approach prospective jurors who might sit at this trial. I thereupon caused an investigation to be made through United States Attorney Pine and Lieut. Earl Hartman, of the Metropolitan Police Force, as a result of which there have been turned over to me several affidavits which indicate that there has been tampering with jurors in this court.

"I need not say this is a matter of great seriousness and that proceedings must be instituted immediately to inquire into the truth or falsity of the statements. Accordingly, I am turning over to the United States attorney the affidavits which heretofore have been supplied to me, with instructions that he institute appropriate proceedings to bring the parties concerned in this matter before me for determination whether or not they should be adjudged in contempt of court. The rule in contempt should be returned immediately, or as soon as possible.

In Status Quo

"At the present time I am not in a position to definitely decide whether a mistrial of the present conspiracy case must be declared. Doubtless it will. However, I feel it advisable to maintain the present situation in status quo until at least tomorrow morning and accordingly it is my order that the trial of the conspiracy case now before me shall be continued until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

"I have given considerable thought to the matter of increasing bond, so far as the three Warrings are concerned. The defendant Sadur is not involved. I am not in a position to close my eyes to the fact that admittedly a huge gambling enterprise has been maintained by the three Warring defendants, and that at least at one time they made claim for deductions in income taxes because of bribes to police officials.

Bonds Set at $50,000

"My attention now is directed to allegations of attempts on their part to contact jurors in this court. Therefore, while I hold in mind the reservation to every fair-minded judge that these defendants may be innocent of the present charges, yet I feel constrained to substantially increase the penalty of their bonds so as to assure their presence before the court when required. The order of the court, therefore, is that each of the Warring defendants shall be committed to custody and there remain until he shall execute bond with sufficient surety in the sum of $50,000 to appear before the court when required.

"This statement is made in the absence of the jury."

The florid, well-groomed numbers operators heard Justice Laws with apparent amazement. Wholly surprised seemed their counsel. Emmitt Warring, 34, described by the prosecutors as the "brains of the gang," is defended by Attorneys Harry T. Whelan and William B. O'Connell. Former District Attorney Rover defends Leo Paul Warring, 35, and Charles Warring, 30, the trigger man of the organization.

Sadur, who was not involved in the jury tampering, is represented by Irving A. Goldstein, former assistant district attorney.

District Attorney Pine and Assistant District Attorney Wilson, who battled three futile weeks to convict the Warrings in the first trial, sat grimly through the statement.

Jurors Returned to Hotel

When Justice Laws concluded, the jurors were brought in and he told them that for reasons which he was unwilling to disclose at the time, the trial would not be resumed until today. The jurors were taken back to the Continental Hotel, where they have been under constant guard at all times they were not in court since the second conspiracy trial began last Wednesday. The justice was the only person to speak a word during the hearing.

Deputy United States marshals, under Deputy Thomas Kelly, stepped up to the defense table and arrested the Warrings, leading them out the rear of the courtroom to cells just beside the door.

Hallways Patrolled

Pine and Wilson went from court directly to their office, where they began their study of the affidavits transmitted by Justice Laws. Their doors were locked and guards patrolled the hallways to keep eavesdroppers away.

Summoned to this conference were Lieut. Hartman, United States Marshal Colpoys and Chief Deputy Marshal Kearney. The marshal's office is responsible for the safe keeping of jurors after they have been sworn and placed in the box.

Soon afterward four bondsmen appeared. They were Meyer and Max Weinstein, of 406 Fifth street northwest, and Isaac Jones and Jimmie Conroy, of 416 Fifth street northwest.

"We cannot discuss $50,000 bonds with you," Pine told them, "until you submit financial statements."

The bondsmen left and returned an hour later with several papers. At that time the prosecutors were in conference.

Rover telephoned to discuss the bonding problem and it was suggested that he ought to take the matter up with Justice Laws. The justice could not be reached for several hours and he agreed to the conference at his chambers.

The investigation which led to the submission of the charges to Justice Laws Sunday afternoon, it was learned, had been under way for some time. Lights were blazing almost all Sunday night in the prosecutors' offices and it was understood the matters involved were being studied then, in anticipation of Justice Laws' instructions yesterday.

Hit-Run Witness Changes Story

suffered head injuries and is at Casualty Hospital. The driver, who police said might have been unaware of the accident, still is sought.

An auto salesman who admitted being at the scene of the Caldwell hit-run killing was released after questioning. He is reported to have said first that he saw a car hurl the son of Representative Caldwell 20 feet in the air at Connecticut avenue and Woodley place northwest Friday.

Later, when asked why he hadn't pursued the hit-run motorist, the salesman is alleged to have said he didn't arrive at the scene until after the accident. Police said a woman companion gave a third version.

Maj. Brown, checking information relative to the hit-run given him by a "high Government official," said: "The case looks hopeful. We may get something within the next couple of days."

He asserted that the $200 reward offered by himself and Radio Announcer Arthur Godfrey for information leading to capture of the fugitive driver had been augmented by $10 from an anonymous citizen. "This contribution," Maj. Brown maintained, "is an indication of the public indignation over the wanton killing of the youngster."

George A. Shouse, 44, of 1227 O street northwest, was rushed to Casualty Hospital with a fractured collarbone and head injuries yesterday following a collision of his auto with a truck driven by Harold Motley, 24, colored, of 909 Third street northwest.

Oley W. Morgan, 21, of 9 Sixth street northeast, sustained a lacerated lip when his auto ran into the rear of a cab in 700 block Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

A motorist was held on a reckless driving charge after his car, police said, critically injured Ellis Everett Thornburg, 68, of 123 Eleventh street.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

John Garfield Explains Viewpoint of the Actor

Faithful Postman Performs Another Service; Madeleine Carroll Is Washington Visitor; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THIS DEPARTMENT is not so naive—it hopes—as to believe that the communication it recently received from John Garfield, star of "They Made Me a Criminal," now on the screen at the Metropolitan, was entirely uninspired by the publicity department of Warner Brothers Pictures. It, nevertheless, is glad to have received the letter, which is interesting and informative and does actually bear the signature of John Garfield—whose correct name, of course, is Jules, when he is not before the cameras.

BELL

At any rate, here is the letter:

Dear Nelson: A rainy day, Paul Muni at home with a slight cold which temporarily stopped production of "Jaurez," so I finally have the time to reply to your recent note requesting this, that and the other by way of a bit of news about Hollywood.

Right now the town is fairly quiet, with production falling off a bit, few social affairs and not much in the way of other activity. Edgar Bergen and his impudent puppet, Charley McCarthy, threw a big gay nineties party last Saturday night that kept us all up until dawn on Sunday. Lots of laughs. Some of the costumes were inspired. Ann Sheridan all but stopped the show wearing an abbreviated can-can costume and Shirley Ross had us in mild hysteria with her backless skirt which, when she turned, revealed an old-fashioned pair of drawers, knee-length and trimmed with lace ruffles.

I look forward to this evening, for Maude Adams is talking at the Philharmonic on "The Theater As I Know It," and we all are eager to hear her. I'll give you a later report on this if it proves as interesting as I expect it to be.

This current picture I'm in has been an exciting experience. With Paul Muni as Mexico's great liberal leader, Benito Juarez; Bette Davis as the Empress Carlotta, Brian Aherne as Maximilian, Claude Rains as Napoleon III, Gale Sondergaard as Eugenie, and a score of other top-flight players in important supporting roles it has been something to remember. And a tremendously interesting and timely theme: the great struggle of a democracy against a practical dictatorship.

I have worked with Mr. Muni much of the time, my part being that of Porfirio Diaz, one of Jaurez's most trusted generals. From that experience I have learned much about the true art of acting; much that no previous experience on the stage or screen ever taught me. What attention to detail! What studied delivery of lines and use of gesture. Muni actually is the slow-spoken, slow-moving, but brilliant-minded Zapotec Indian who freed Mexico from 300 years of dictatorship and autocracy, and who successfully led his people against a monarchy when Napoleon put Maximilian and Carlotta on their thrones by force of arms. Old Don Benito was a great man; greater than even Washington and Lincoln in many ways, I believe.

Bette Davis in Jet-Black Wig!

Bette Davis as Carlotta, the tragic empress, has one of the great parts of her career. And she looks beautiful, just beautiful. As the 24-year-old consort of Maximilian she wears a jet black wig, with a severe center part, and it alters her appearance quite as much as you'd imagine it would. And her gowns are something to see, huge skirts of silks and satins and metal brocades, with jewels that in themselves must represent a fortune. I'm not the one generally to notice such things, but this time it was different.

William Dieterle is directing, and has had a long, hard session of work, for the picture started in mid-November last year and is still going strong. Muni's slight illness today gave us the first production halt we've had.

I probably will be seeing you not long from now, for I expect to go East for a play sometime in February or March. I've already given Warner Brothers the 60-day notice that my contract provides annually and am all set to leave as soon as they give me word. I'll do a play for the Group, of course, and will be mighty glad to get back into the theater for a little while. I'm convinced that every Hollywood actor should break away from films once in a while—not too often, of course—and get back behind the footlights where he can hear and feel and see a live, human audience.

I had a note from Franchot Tone just a day or two ago and what he wrote was just added proof that I'm right in my theory. He had almost forgotten what it was like to step out on a stage and play through three acts without interruption except when the curtains rose and fell to end and start an act.

Here, in pictures, it's so different. You step in front of the cameras and almost before you've started your lines the director calls "cut" and sets up for a new angle. And then back you go, trying to recapture and preserve the mood—perhaps the mood of a scene which you had started a week or so before and never finished for some one of a hundred different reasons, all logical in film work, but slightly tough on the actor.

But I should complain! I love it. I close with warmest regards.

Yours very truly, (Signed) JOHN GARFIELD.

Regrets Are Poor Things, at Best

This seems to be a week of regrets, induced by a recurrent complication of hangnails, sneezing and the black plague, to which this desk seems to be periodically subject.

It was a source of deep regret not to be able to address a distinguished group in Annapolis yesterday on topics concerning the theater. They, obviously, are the beneficiaries. The talk, postponed until February 20, the Fates being propitious, would have pertained to various aspects of a purely personal notion of the functions of the drama critic. It would have trod on some toes and left others unmolested; it would have paid no great respect to the "This is a fine play, BUT . . ." membership of the Broadway Death Watch; it probably would have bored the audience—if any—stiff.

No less keen is my regret at not having been able to attend the Madeleine Carroll cocktail party in the Carlton Hotel yesterday evening at 5:30. I have no doubt that this was one of the most felicitous affairs of the season to which the drama desks have been graciously bidden. It just wasn't possible, the state of the clinic being what it is.

What a delightful thing it would have been if Miss Carroll might have been in Washington for the President's Birthday Celebrations, instead of exactly one week later. Merely another of "those things" that harassed the entertainment chairman.

Along with time, tide and taxes, the screenings go on apace. Today at 1:30 p. m., the Loew interests are previewing Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of Robert E. Sherwood's Pulitzer Prize Play of "Idiot's Delight," costarring Clark Gable and Norma Shearer—or the other way around, as you prefer. Tomorrow the Warner executives are spinning Charles Laughton's production of "The Beachcomber," starring himself and wife, Elsa Lanchester, through the sprockets. More of these later, if the hangnails, etcetera, don't get us permanently down—you hope!

The Old Dominion Moves Into the Capital, En Masse

Whether the news columns of the daily prints have made the subject uppermost in the public mind or not, there is a convention of the motion picture theater owners and exhibitors of Virginia going on in the National Capital at the present moment.

It is being attended by all of the notables of the Old Dominion, as well as Ol' Masse Ed Kuydendall, national president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America. The sessions, I believe, are being held in the Shoreham Hotel. At least, I was apprised of a 9:30 breakfast at the Shoreham yesterday morning, which, presumably, was attended by a large majority of the delegates. Many of them, I suspect, merely stopped by for the conventional scrambled eggs and bacon on their way home!

"Washington-Merry-Go-Round," the original play by Leon Pearson, being presented by the Washington Civic Theater in the Wardman Park Theater throughout this week, is enlisting the interest of the Broadway producers. Among those who have pricked an ear to the local ballyhoo are George Abbott, famous comedy producer, and Eddie Dowling, whose production of Paul Vincent Carroll's "Shadow and Substance" was one of last season's major hits at the National, and who now is achieving additional fame in "Here Come the Clowns," in New York. It is not impossible—what with Mr. Pearson doing a little rewriting and generally whipping his opus into shape—that "Washington-Merry-Go-Round" might eventually begin to whirl on Broadway.

'Of Mice and Men' Exerts Tragic Mood at the National

It is not a pretty play that John Steinbeck has concocted from his novel of "Of Mice and Men," which is being presented in the National Theater this week as the fourth play of the seventh subscription season of the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society of Washington. It is, on the contrary, a grim, stark and relentless tragedy, peopled preponderantly by men, that traces a sinister pattern of sadistic impulses that may very easily prove repugnant to a large segment of the theatergoing populace.

This is not to say that Mr. Steinbeck has striven futively in the field of drama in which he has chosen to exercise his talents. "Of Mice and Men" is a strong and virulent play. It deals handsomely with aspects of human living that are unique and not without their direct and vibrant appeal to those who never have encountered anything similar in the pursuit of their normal lives. The lives that are lived in the three acts and six scenes of the current drama, however, are not those of the normal human being. They are the lives of stragglers about the fringes of society who find in the fields of manual labor in a fertile California valley strange motivations for their behavior.

A Giant Goes Berserk

The pivotal characters in the action are two "bindle-stiffs" seeking employment in the grain fields of the wider of the California ranches. They are a thoroughly rational young man, who has in tow a giant of a fellow of impaired mentality and a complete unconsciousness of the power of his misguided physical strength. This Gargantuan Lennie entertains a strikingly contradictory love for the beautiful things of life. He has a tragic predilection for crushing them with his hands. His unwitting instinct to kill encompasses mice, puppy dogs and, finally, the beautiful young bride of the son of the boss of the ranch where he and George are employed. When the posse closes in on Lennie, who has strangled the sirenic blonde, with no more malicious intention than he has snuffed out the life of lesser animals he merely sought to caress, his constant mentor and guide shoots him dead in a compassionate climax to a drama that could have no other logical outcome.

In its unsoftened adherence to the inexorable demands of a dramatic exposition that could follow another course of development only at the cost of a definite compromise with realism, "Of Mice and Men" may be said to be of a piece with "Tobacco Road," which will be coming along to the same stage shortly for its fifth Washington visit. The characters that dominate the action of the Steinbeck play are scarcely less primitive than those which shape the appeal of the perennial drama of the Georgia sharecroppers. Both are strong meat for the palates of those inured to the theater's more usual and gentler offerings.

There is, however, no gainsaying the powerful impact imparted to any audience by the three acts of "Of Mice and Men." It presents intervals of tedious dialogue, to be sure, during which nothing much in the furtherance of the primary purposes of the drama seem to be accomplished, but it counteracts these static periods of barren effort with moments of strength that are both compelling and convincing. Nor is the play without its reasonably steady flow of comedy, despite the inescapable overtone of tragedy which it constantly implies and frequently emphasizes.

Guy Robertson Scores

The cast which brought "Of Mice and Men" to a Capital rostrum for the first time last night was one of conspicuous ability. Guy Robertson, in the role of George, made it conclusively evident that he needs none of the chromatic nuances of the lighter musical stage to bolster his claim to eminence as a "straight" actor of full and impressive equipment. His performance betrayed no sign that music is an essential to his stellar capacity on the boards. In the role of Lennie, Edward Andrews revealed an equally effective, and perhaps more difficult, capability for meeting the requirements of a role that is unsympathetic and, in some of its manifestations, no less than terrifying. Claire Luce, in the only feminine role in the play, acquitted herself admirably in a part that is not too stringent in its demands.

There are several others in the cast who deserve credit for sustaining the mood and tempo of a somber addition to the list of the theater's less enlivening exhibits. Foremost among these, I should nominate John F. Hamilton, as Candy, a character so shrewdly contrived that one is impelled to believe that after Mr. Hamilton's performance has been written into the stage directions it henceforth will be deemed "actor proof." The veteran Thomas Findlay also performs his chore with accustomed acceptability, in the role of The Boss, and Lester Damon does as well as anyone might in the comparatively subordinate role of Curley.

There can be no great controversy, in short, of the manner in which "Of Mice and Men" is executed behind the footlights. It is only that Mr. Steinbeck gets pretty grim about it all.

MADELEINE CARROLL

one of the cinema's loveliest and most talented British importations, who yesterday evening was host to the press at a cocktail party in the Carlton Hotel. Miss Carroll first leaped to American fame with Robert Donat in "The 39 Steps" and since has been seen in a long list of successes, including "The Prisoner of Zenda," "Lloyds of London," "The General Died at Dawn," "Blockade" and numerous others

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 6.—My heartfelt sympathy to those who missed Maude Adams. Her presence on the stage of the Philharmonic was the cue for a demonstration the like of which I've never seen before. A darling feminine little lady parted velvet curtains and floated onto the stage in a cloud of gray chiffon. The entire audience, as though rehearsed, stood instantly to greet her. And were they rewarded!

HEDDA HOPPER

We prattle about actors, but Maude Adams has poured out her talent and emotion like a benediction. Her voice is like a melody that Schubert might have composed, her spirit enternal youth.

When she tells how she learned to laugh, you want to go and find a horse and carriage and try it too. She'd finished her year's engagement in Oakland and was about to take the train for New York. Her producer said, "Now we'll have a little lesson on the way to the train. I'll teach you how to laugh." So, to the rhythm of Old Dobbin, she started, "Ha, ha, ha," and when he got into a gallop the ha-ha's became a crescendo and then hysterical laughter. She's never been afraid to laugh since.

And her first meeting with James Barrie was a honey. She was seated in the living room of his home when he entered holding on to the collar of a huge dog and asked her, "Would you like to see us wrestle?" Then slipping a cap over his face, he and the dog wrestled. If you're the shy type, try to put a visitor at his ease by doing that some time!

On an opening night when she was frightfully nervous, her manager, Charles Frohman, said, "My dear, people didn't come to see you fail. They came to enjoy themselves." "I instantly forgot about myself," she said, "and worried only about the poor audience."

Please, Mr. Selznick, give us a picture with Maude Adams soon!

Bette Davis drove her station wagon 90 miles in 96 minutes, which isn't exactly standing still, to save the life of her pet pooch, Tibby, bitten by a tarantula at Bette's desert home near La Quinta. Tibby arrived at the vet's just in time. Bette is almost a zoophile in her love for animals. (Isn't that a swell word?—I just stumbled across it!) She is president of the Tailwaggers' Foundation.

And now, Virginia Weidler, the girl who nearly stole "Out West With the Hardy's" from Mickey Rooney, is going into "What's a Fixer For?"—in a part originally written for a boy. Lee Tracy is to be starred in that. Lee's just back from St. Moritz and told me they had to put special weights in his skis to keep him from flying into heaven instead of remaining on earth. His missus is a darling.

The New Fashions

On a rainy afternoon Banton and Greer had a standing-room-only audience for their new fashion show. They introduced hats by Mr. Moller who was introduced to them by Joan Crawford. She, who of course was there to see her protege, was wearing a stunning hat and bought six more. Barbara Stanwyck took time out to select her new wardrobe. John Fredericks looked them over. Sylvia Fairbanks came hatted—first time I've ever seen her in one, with Mrs. Ronnie Colman.

Horatio Alger Hero Bobs Up In Hollywood

A Bread Wrapper Becomes High-Priced Scenarist and Author

By Frederick C. Othman.

United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Feb. 6.—Here's the story of a bread wrapper in a wholesale bakery who became a highly paid movie scenario writer, exactly like the correspondence courses promise—except that he took no mail-order lessons.

Nobody ever worked any harder than Dalton Trumbo to get where he is today. He's only 33 now, but he's the author of nine books. Mostly unpublished; 90 short stories, mostly ditto, and some picture scripts which have been so good lately that all Hollywood has been wondering exactly who he is.

Trumbo was born in Montrose, Colo., worked for a while as a cub reporter on the Daily Sentinel at Grand Junction, Colo., and entered the University of Colorado at Boulder when he was 18. After a year there, his family moved to California, and Dalton sought a job here for the summer. He got it at the Davis Perfection Bakery, operating a break-wrapping machine. That was piece work. Sometimes he earned as much as $40 a week. He kept on at the bakery—and stayed there nine and a half years.

He worked at night in the bakery, attended the University of California in the mornings, did movie reviews for a local publication called the Hollywood Spectator, and spent two hours a day repossessing motorcycles for his uncle, a dealer. In his spare time he wrote novels and short stories which nobody would publish and during prohibition days did a little bootlegging in the bakery district. That was an important part of his literary career.

It seemed that George Jean Nathan, the critic, wrote a piece for Vanity Fair, lambasting Hollywood. Trumbo replied in a letter which the Hollywood Spectator published. The editor of Vanity Fair saw Trumbo's letter—and asked him to contribute a story. Dalton wrote one about bootlegging and collected $100, the first actual cash he ever earned with his pen.

By 1934 he was managing editor of the Spectator, which collapsed three months later. Trumbo was stranded. He ghost-wrote a book for a man who paid him another $100 and gave him his dinners for the five weeks he pounded the typewriter. The book is a good one, too, but Trumbo hesitates to mention it for fear of embarrassing the man whose name is on the title page.

Dalto was so broke in 1935 that he actually walked from Hollywood to Burbank to see about getting a job as a script reader at Warner Brothers. He went on the pay roll at $27.50 a week. After a year of it he wrote his seventh novel—the first six still are in his trunk—and it was published in English under the title, "Eclipse." He also started selling his short stories. The first 80 brought only rejection slips but the eighty-first garnered a check from the Saturday Evening Post, the eighty-second a remittance from Liberty Magazine, and so on. Warner Brothers promoted him to a full-fledged movie writer and raised his wage to $35 a week. He still was earning that sum when he wrote his first picture, "Road Gang." He wrote another book called "Washington Jitters," went to Columbia Studios, and then to M-G-M, where he received an excellent salary for 64 weeks without even seeing his name at the front of a movie. From there he moved to R-K-O, where he still is writing, and where he wrote "A Man to Remember," one of the surprise hits of this winter.

He also has sold within the last two weeks a story, "Heaven With a Barbed Wire Fence," for a reported $10,000 to 20th Century-Fox and will have published this spring a novel, "Johnny Get Your Gun."

Trans-Lux

The devastation of the Chilean earthquake, where the death list totaled 30,000, is graphically portrayed in this week's news pictorial at the Trans-Lux Theater; also the fall of Barcelona, the entrance of the insurgent troops and the exodus of the refugee loyalists furnishing scenes not quickly forgotten.

The Northeast blizzard, showing Chicago traffic temporarily paralyzed, is also spectacularly impressive. Likewise, the President is shown expressing his thanks for the public interest in the antiparalysis campaign and Mrs. Roosevelt cutting a mammoth birthday cake at a local hotel and the President's mother as honor guest at the celebration in New York. Altogether there are 37 timely items in this part of the program.

An extraordinarily meritorious travelogue is "Fabulous Marseilles" and another "short" portrayal, "Ski Rhythm," is charming in its Alpine winter splendor and thrilling in ski expertness and hazardous adventure. "Screen Snapshots," picturing movie celebrities cavorting at a pig roast on Catalina Island, and a Disney cartoon, "Self Control," featuring Donald Duck, are by no means a small part of a most entertaining program.

The Overton Bill

It is a happy coincidence that the Overton bill was released simultaneously with the Griffenhagen report. Together they point the way toward far more satisfactory government for the District of Columbia.

In accord with its instructions, the Griffenhagen firm offered no solution of the Federal-District fiscal relations problem. But it did suggest in very positive terms that the amount of the Federal payment to the local government should be worked out now, "according to whatever formula may seem fair—or even on a basis of compromise." For proper adjustment of the political relations between the Federal Government and the National Capital must remain difficult until underlying friction over the division of Washington's expenses has been settled.

As if in response to this appeal for a fiscal formula, Senator Overton has offered his bill. It is brief and simple. Yet its terms leave no room for doubt as to what the future obligation of the Government to the Nation's Capital would be. In this respect the bill is an admirable companion measure to the Griffenhagen report. The primary aim of that document is to simplify the administrative end of the local government.

Congress discarded the formula proposed by the Jacobs committee two years ago because it was extremely complicated as well as being unfair to the local community. The appropriation of arbitrary lump sums for the District has continued for want of any satisfactory yardstick to determine the Federal obligation. In other words, the fiscal relations problem has remained unsolved largely because it was feared that no simple and equitable formula could be devised.

But that assumption has to be discarded with the advent of the Overton bill. This proposed legislation provides simply that the Federal payment to the District in lieu of taxes shall be "an amount which bears the same ratio to the total general fund appropriations for defraying the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for such fiscal year as the land owned by the United States in the District of Columbia on the first day of August of the preceding fiscal year bears to the entire area of the District of Columbia."

Under this formula no consideration is given to the fact that an abnormal number of other institutions, such as foreign embassies and legations, are tax-exempt in the District of Columbia. The Federal Government is asked simply to pay its indisputable share of the maintenance of Washington's municipal services. Indeed, it may be said that the Government is asked to pay less than its share, since the formula would apply only to the general fund. Congress would contribute nothing to the highways and water funds, although the Government obviously benefits from the services thus financed.

Adoption of this formula is as important in the fiscal field as is the reorganization proposed by the Griffenhagen report in the administrative field. With such an admirable formula at hand, all excuse for Federal Budget Bureau control over the District vanishes and the strong arguments for creating a responsible municipal government here are even further strengthened.

Jury Tampering?

Judge Laws has struck in a bold manner at what he fears may be an attempt to bribe jurors in the Warring trial. Fair-minded individuals will not draw too sweeping conclusions from the judge's guarded statement, but evidently the situation is serious enough to demand the sternest measures.

A mistrial will probably be declared. The statement of the court alone is sufficient to raise doubt as to the impartiality of the jury in the public mind. This apparent breakdown of the second trial is particularly unfortunate because of the failure of the first jury to agree. But that does not affect the necessity of making certain that this important case be tried entirely free from suspicions of bribery.

Judge Laws would be justified in taking special precautions in any event. "I am not in a position," he says, "to close my eyes to the fact that admittedly a huge gambling enterprise has been maintained by the three Warring defendants and that at least at one time they made claim for deductions in income taxes because of bribes to police officials." That background tends to give added substance to present charges of jury tampering.

The court and the District Attorney are to be congratulated on the prompt manner in which they have ordered an investigation into this alleged attempt to debauch the procedure of justice. They may be certain that public opinion will sustain any action which they deem essential to punish any who may be found guilty of tampering with the jury.

At The Water's Edge

Protection of Senatorial patronage was undoubtedly the major factor involved in the repudiation of the Roberts nomination. But the overwhelming character of yesterday's rebuff to Mr. Roosevelt, even exceeding the ratio of disapproval shown earlier in the adverse report of the Judiciary Committee, was a surprise to many. When only nine members of the President's party can be prevailed upon to support his nominee in a Senate vote the decline of executive leadership is unmistakable.

For this outcome Mr. Roosevelt has only himself to blame. It is now just two years since the very ill-advised proposal to pack the Supreme Court was first advanced and it is no mere coincidence that this period has seen a downward trend in the President's influence. Nor has he learned political wisdom from the way the tide has turned against him. The nomination of Thomas R. Amlie to the ICC is a case in point. The former Wisconsin Congressman was yesterday able to assert that he possesses the very negative virtue of not being a Communist. He produced no positive qualifications to justify his selection by Mr. Roosevelt for this important technical post.

If these were normal times, with only routine problems confronting the Nation, the series of rebuffs lately received by the President would cause no apprehension. Most of them he has himself invited and in most of them the injury, if any, has so far been at the expense of Mr. Roosevelt's personal pride. It does not follow that this will continue to be the case. There is a narrow but important line of demarcation between a highly desirable assertion of Congressional independence and any outright revolt against executive leadership which, in striking at the President, may easily hit fundamental national interests.

That this is no imaginary danger is indicated by the discussion now raging with regard to the Administration's foreign policy. There is no doubt that Mr. Roosevelt might have handled the matter of the airplane sales to France in a more open manner. Resentment on this score has focused not on the fact of these negotiations but on the wholly unnecessary secrecy which has surrounded them. With more skillful management on the Administration's side, and less disposition to stir up a row on the part of Congress, no such furor as is now apparent would have arisen.

Regardless of the President's errors, whether of omission or commission, it is apparent that a great deal of politics is beginning to find its way into the subject of American foreign policy. That is not the less deplorable because it is natural. As a party leader Mr. Roosevelt is now clearly vulnerable and to capitalize on an opponent's vulnerability is a fundamental axiom of politics. The temptation to do so is the greater because there is today not merely a rejuvenated and powerful opposition party as such. There is also an important wing of the Democratic Party which is legitimately resentful over the President's effort to treat it as an undesirable stepchild, allowed only on sufferance within the gracious household of the New Deal.

This dual antagonism, apparent in every action taken by the present Congress, is intensified by the third-term issue. Until the President states categorically that he will not be a candidate in 1940 there will be a strong temptation to resist his leadership, even in matters where such resistance may have deplorable results from any long-range viewpoint. For this reason Mr. Roosevelt, on whom an enormous responsibility now rests, would be well-advised to stop the third-term rumor categorically. He can do so at any moment by uttering a single sentence. And nothing would be more calculated to revive his prestige.

But if this is now a necessary action for the President the parallel duty for Congress is not less clear. It is incumbent upon that body to remember the truism that politics should end at the water's edge. It is vital that Congress should advance no obstacle, but on the contrary should extend a constructive co-operation, in the case of every Administration effort to insure peace by methods more intelligent than a pretense that there is today no threat of war of any real concern to the United States.

It is in no way sensational to assert that the issue of peace or war now depends in no small measure on the foreign policy pursued by the United States. To impede a further westward aggression on the part of the Fascist powers this country has only to make plain the fact that such aggression would arouse a very real hostility among the great majority of Americans. To encourage such aggression, on the other hand, we have merely to indicate that a major war is a matter of indifference to us—which everyone knows in his heart is not the case.

Without the slightest risk of "entangling alliances" the Administration can now make plain the dominant national attitude in a way which will materially reduce the risk of another world war. That this is the President's objective is clearly apparent. Any legislator who opposes such an admirable course for narrow political reasons would be acting with a blind recklessness for which no condemnation could be too strong.

Serbs And Croats

The resignation of Dr. Milan Stoyadinovich as premier of Yugoslavia and his replacement by Dragisha Cvetkovich foreshadows a new attempt to bridge the gap between Serbs and Croats that has long weakened the unity of the kingdom.

The times are propitious for such a constructive development. No European nation can at this critical juncture afford the luxury of internal disunity, least of all Yugoslavia. With her frontiers adjoining those of both partners of the Berlin-Rome axis and with her alliances with France and Rumania continuing in force, Yugoslavia is very close to the potential firing line.

For all his great gifts, Dr. Stoyadinovich never succeeded in winning the Croats to the support of his regime. During recent months opposition to him, far from diminishing, has grown. This is attested by the fact that in last December's general elections, the government list received less votes than in 1935, while the general opposition list, headed by the Croat leader, Dr. Matchek, registered a decided increase.

Dr. Matchek has not been included in the new government and has so far refrained from indicating whether he will support it or not. The assumption is, however, that he will throw his weight behind it. Some of the men responsible for the transfer of power from Stoyadinovich to his successor are believed to be very close to the Croat leader and probably acted on his behalf in the negotiations leading up to the formation of the new regime.

There is a real prospect, therefore, of a closing of the ranks in Yugoslavia, a factor calculated to strengthen the kingdom's position during the critical days that are ahead. Nonetheless, the change in government does not foreshadow any change in foreign policy. The assumption is that Yugoslavia, while remaining loyal to her alliances, will continue that policy of collaboration with Berlin and Rome made necessary both by her geographical position and by recent international developments.

Our Taxes

A pamphlet just published by the Public Affairs Committee, entitled "Our Taxes and What They Buy," contains some interesting information on the comparative burden of taxes in the United States and in European countries.

While the United States leads the world in the size of its total tax bill—national, State and local—Maxwell S. Stewart, author of the study, concludes that people living in the leading European countries are more heavily burdened by taxes than we are. In 1937-38, for instance, about one-fifth of our national income was taken for taxes. The proportion was slightly higher in Great Britain, while in France over one-fourth of the country's income went for taxes. The percentage was even higher in Germany.

The satisfaction which some of our taxpayers may derive from the contemplation of the hard lot of others is, however, likely to be marred if they take a few neglected facts into consideration. The amounts now being paid in taxes actually fall far short of the amount that would be collected if our Federal and local governments were balancing their budgets. Unless, therefore, we are to look forward to an indefinite prolongation of deficit financing or a sharp contraction of Government outlays, the prospect confronting American taxpayers is rather gloomy.

Mr. Stewart holds out little hope for a decline in expenditure or in the taxes which finance expenditures. As he states, political limits to the amount that can be collected from taxpayers are felt before the economic limits of capacity to pay have been reached. To the question how heavy a tax load the people can be made to bear, there is no certain answer. That again is a matter partly of how the revenue is spent by the Government. If taxes are used to provide services that increase the welfare of the community and indirectly add to productive capacity, they will be less burdensome than if they go into unproductive expenditures.

Theoretically there is no limit to the amount of income that the Government might take provided it redistributed it. Actually a point is eventually reached when the taxpayer either rebels or the heavy hand of the taxgatherer suppresses enterprise and causes production to decline.

"What would you suggest as selection for a national tree?" someone asks. Oh, we should think that almost any nut tree would be appropriate.

Probably the worst insurance risk these days is an absent-minded pedestrian.

The Sale Of Planes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The idea of one Congressman seems to be that if we sell airplanes to France and England, we should also sell them to Germany and Italy. Why should the United States sell war planes and munitions to any country which is an avowed enemy of democracies? Why should the United States not sell war planes and munitions to other democracies, who are trying to "make the world safe for democracy" by developing their defenses against possible attacks by those nations that are trying to destroy the freedom only obtained in a democracy?

If we are to sell war planes also to countries that may later turn them against us, why not invite Germany, for one, to establish air bases on Long Island, Key West and the Canal Zone?

Germany wants her colonies back. After her efforts to destroy her neighbors, in an unprovoked war upon them, is she worthy of having her colonies returned? Is she to pay no further penalty for instigating what became a wholesale massacre of some millions of those who were formerly not her enemies? With very good reason we have forbidden the sale of helium gas to Germany.

Billions might be saved if nations would settle their quarrels by arbitration instead of by force and bloodshed. When will that time come? H. BRADFORD.
Bethesda, Md., Feb. 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why all this hullabaloo about selling airplanes to France? Our own instincts of self-preservation should tell us that under existing threatening circumstances we should give moral and reasonable support to our cousin democracies, France and England. Helping them to protect themselves is the best and surest way to safeguard the Monroe Doctrine, international trade and the lives and well-being of our own people.

It is foolish to consider we have any safe frontiers when there are no frontiers to the world dreams and unscrupulous ambitions of dictators. In the words of Benjamin Franklin, the three great democracies "must hang together or hang separately." There can be no real security except in the collective security of France, Great Britain and the United States.

Though President Roosevelt now says it is false that he said the Rhine is our frontier, yet from the standpoint of our own security it really is no lie but the uncomfortable truth and the sooner our own people wake up and realize it, the better it will be for their own safety. HENRY D. BAKER.

No Meddling

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to me our President is meddling too much with the quarrels and affairs of war-scared Europe for the good of our peaceful United States. Does he want to involve us in a war with foreign governments on account of any nation's dislike for the Jews?

I feel like most people that the treatment of the Jews in some of the nations of Europe is unjust and uncalled for. Our sympathy is with the oppressed in all persecutions, yes, always. But not to the extent of making our liberty-loving country a party to the quarrels and wars of Europe.

The President may be "drunk on power," and so is Hitler and Mussolini; but our Congress should stay sober and not let intoxication of unbridled power run away with us.

I mix with the plain people "back home," and know they don't want to get mixed up in the affairs of other nations, nor be embroiled in their quarrels and in their wars—they want to follow the advice of George Washington, and have no entangling alliances with other nations. MOSES BUTLER.
Washington, Jan. 27.

The Infinite Mercy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The loss of another young life in Washington is certainly to be deplored under such tragic circumstances, and my heartfelt sympathy goes out to the bereaved ones.

However, much has been said and written of a merciless condemnatory nature regarding the other party of this regrettable accident. Yet it is quite possible that the person involved was momentarily panic stricken and took such action in the stress of that moment which they now sincerely regret.

All this condemnation and fury does not help them to come forward. Is it not possible to conceive that they might willingly change places with the little victim were it possible so to do?

Let this unfortunate party to this tragedy resolve not to carry this tremendous burden forever hidden in the recesses of their heart and mind to dog their lives with constant fear and agony. But let him now step forward with courage and strength in the knowledge that there is One who ever understands human weaknesses and frailties and is ever forgiving and loving to all His children at all times and under all conditions, and His great law is "judge not that ye be not judged." RACHEL.

The Clark Club

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thank you, Washington Post, for the fine publicity you gave the Clark Club of Barney Neighborhood House in last Sunday's edition.

It happens that I have been "in" on the Clark Club since its birth, which occurred on March 26, 1938, and it is a lusty infant, as your article depicted.

I could go on and tell you of many worthwhile things accomplished by these boys in their short ten months of organization—such as distributing Thanksgiving and Christmas baskets to the less fortunate in their neighborhood—such as completely depleting their "treasury" by sending a little wreath to the family of a member who had lost their only baby—such as putting Christmas trees in homes that did not even hope to have any greens last Christmas. They love their athletics and their games, with what meager equipment they have, but also they have shown great growth in other ways.

Washington (and the U. S. A.) need other alley neighborhood clubs organized and run along the lines of the Clark Club and the Police Boys' Clubs and for a little effort and money and a lot of devotion these clubs would pay our America huge dividends in building fine citizens and automatically reducing so-called juvenile delinquency. Youthful energy must have an outlet and if unable to find it in constructive ways it will "out" in a destructive way.

Right now we have dozens of other boys of teen age literally clamoring at our doors to become members (if you had heard a group of them pound our front door last evening you would know I mean "literally") and we cannot take them in or advise them to go somewhere else for what they want. And this one mile from the Capitol! The shame of it! GEORGE ELLIOTT,
Honorary Vice President, Clark Club, Barney Neighborhood House.
Washington, Feb. 1.

Progress And Poverty

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We have plenty of production and plenty of capital and surplus wealth, and yet about 13,000,000 are suffering for lack of means to buy.

Also, besides the starving millions there are other millions who are skimping and straining and pretending in the effort to keep up the old order of capitalism and churchianity.

Change is the law of life, and engineering science is now three generations ahead of political science and religion. Things which have lost the power to change die off the earth.

Dr. Townsend's idea to reduce the size of the army of labor after 60, and to transfer a portion of the enormous production of modern America from those who have too much to those who have too little, does sound too good to be true, but it is the only way out of the dangerous condition that we are in of starving in the midst of plenty. Progress and poverty always have gone together. Why? Read Henry George. EDMOND FONTAINE.
Ruxton, Md., Feb. 4.

Sees 'War Mongering'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is becoming quite clear to me that the inciters to war and warmongers are the irresponsible reporters and columnists who impute intentions to responsible statesmen of all nations. I can understand why in some countries the freedom of the press has been totally destroyed. We can hope that the professional prognosticators of evil will become sufficiently ridiculous that they will destroy themselves rather than cause the destruction of others and ultimately the destruction of the freedom of speech and the press.

Hoover, in his recent speech, said:

"We should not be isolationists in proposals to join in the most healing of all processes of peace—economic co-operation to restore prosperity."

I have seen no editorials that deal with that subject except such as suggest suppression of those who find cause for war and revolution in their economic insufficiency. The furtherance of a policy of living and letting live is our only hope for permanent peace and prosperity. A state of mind that indicates the absence of such a policy leads to more war and more destruction. CITIZEN X.

The Sociological Muse

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Glancing through the report of the Forest Service for 1938 I noticed such prominent headings in its 80-odd pages as "Underwriting a Civilization," "Public Regulation," "Public Ownership," "Public Acquisition," "Forests, People and Democracy," etc. The report speaks of "social security," "underprivileged and undernourished people," "human needs," "failure of democracy," "exploitation," "low living standards," along with other good Marxian slogans. I could barely see the trees for collectivism.

If other branches of the Department of Agriculture should follow this plan we might find the Bureau of Plant Industry delving into "Petunias, Profiteering and the Proletariat," the Bureau of Animal Industry indulging in "Swine, Slums and Socialism," the Biological Survey arguing about "Lame Ducks, Licenses and Leisure Hours," the Bureau of Chemistry analyzing "Brews, Business Cycles and Brimstone," the Soil Conservation Service pleading for "Sand, Sevietism and Salvation," and so on down the long avenue of bureaucracy. In such an event public documents would crash the gate into the inner circle of real literature.

The Post Impressionist

Col. Culpepper Hawkins

HIS FULL NAME is Churchill Lomax John Byrd Peck Alexander Culpepper Hawkins. There ought to be a Fitz-Hugh, a Dabney and a Darby in there, but there isn't. The name is very good as it stands. How he got the colonel stuck on to it I have never learned and am too tactful to inquire. He has an annuity that maintains his dignity and almost feeds him, and he lives in what used to be the home of one of the Fairfaxes down in Paradise Valley.

And he visits me once each summer just after my wife gets away, and once in the winter when she is home.

To speak frankly, he is an asset and a liability. While he is with me during summer in my wife's absence he virtually assumes control of my house and the bills mount up noticeably. "You know, Wade, as a Peck, though you don't come in as a Culpepper or a Fitzhugh, I'm sorry to say, you must hold up your position. That stag party you are giving: now, don't serve white wine, have champagne and brandy," and so on. Oh, well, he has his way! And when the party comes off, it is his party.

But of a morning when he escorts me a few blocks on my way downtown his countenance of my existence is worth a great deal. It is like Thackeray's wished-for promenade down Piccadilly with a duke on each arm. For it means that all day I shall be questioned: "Hey, Wade, who's that handsome old man I saw with you." To which I modestly reply: "Oh, that was just one of my Virginia cousins."

Well, after he has been with me for about two weeks, I open my mail at the breakfast table and casually say: "Martha says she will be home next Friday."

His reply to that is warm and in perfect taste. Nothing more is said at the time; but the next day he will announce: "Wade, I have received word that demands my presence at home. I hate to cut short my visit and I regret exceedingly not seeing Martha. You will explain to her, I hope. Good-by, and thank you."

But, in wintertime even Martha welcomes him; for, following his arrival, there will come a box by express and this box usually contains three or four old hams, two dressed domestic turkeys, a dressed wild turkey and a mess of country sausage. When we open it he always apologizes to Martha:

"You know, Martha, those turkeys will keep perfectly, provided they are put on ice. Now, I could have added another wild turkey, but I suspect you do not care for the gamey flavor and the dryness. As a matter of fact, wild turkey calls for a high-grade claret or a good Burgundy—Burgundy preferred—and you, as a white ribboner, never get the full taste."

To this, Martha makes some innocent reply and we settle down to a perfectly marvelous fortnight of good old Virginia eating. The other night after I had helped him to the two "oysters" from the back of the turkey and a liberal section of the short joint, he asked:

"Did I ever tell you about Conway Taliaferro and his wild turkey?"

Poising his claret, he eyed it, savored its bouquet, took a good drink and began:

"It happened way back in 1880, when I was a freshman. I didn't live in the college, I boarded with Mrs. Taliaferro, a splendid, competent woman who set a generous table. We Virginians were pretty poor in those days, just after the Civil War; but, by crackie, we lived well." Here he paused for a little ceremony with his claret.

"Well, living with the Taliaferros, I got to know Conway pretty well. He had been courier to Gen. Lee and was the finest horseman I have ever seen. Conway had two mills out on Buffalo Creek and, in the fall, every morning as he rode out to oversee them he would carry his shotgun across his saddle bow and his retriever, Ponto, would follow him. His habit was to shoot from the saddle, his mount being trained to that, and Ponto brought the birds in.

"In those days quail were plentiful all through Prince Edward County and every evening Conway would return with both saddlebags filled. The quail Mrs. Taliaferro treated as side dishes or extras, her table never relied upon them; but, roasted and piled on a big platter they were there for those of us who chose.

"One night, when Conway rode up, he called us boys back to the barn and exhibited with great pride a magnificent wild turkey he had just shot. 'Yes, sir!' he told us, 'I shot him right out of the tree as he was roosting. You see I hadn't been by that way, over where Uncle Mose lives, for a long time; but I had some business with Branch Worsham and had to come back that way. I saw the turkey and here he is.'"

Here Col. Hawkins paused to refresh himself and take another bit of turkey. Then he took up his story again:

"We had wild turkey the next day and it was good, Conway doing his share of the eating. A few nights after that, we were all out front after dinner when an old colored man came up. 'Good evenin' to you, ladies and gen'men, good ev'en. Do Marse Conway Tolliver live here?' Whereupon I offered to find Mr. Taliaferro.

"When Conway came out he greeted the old man jauntily: 'Hi, Uncle Mose! What you doin' over here?'

"'Well, Marse Conway, it's like this: Martha says she saw you come riding by the cabin th' other night, en soon she heard a gun go off. Nex' mornin' one of our half-bred tuckeys was gone. I just thought.'

"'Mose,' said Conway hurriedly, 'let's get away from these laughing hyenas and talk it over.'"

Conway paid well for that turkey, for he would never own up how much." WADE TENCH.

Man Of Action

WE SAW him come and we saw him go, the gay gray optimist who quit the small-town nickelodeon business to become the most spectacular and the least hate-worthy man of his type and time, which was the American era of wonderful nonsense. Charlie Pyle, dead now in Los Angeles, after several lingering years of life on borrowed time, was goofy. Not crazy, but goofy. He had big ideas and a casual, inefficient, careless ability, and he would have been a Barnum if he had had in his make-up a little of that ingredient that you might call balance.

Tex Rickard had contempt for him because Tex was secretive and a bluffer and a bit of a wolf as well, whereas Charlie would show you his hole-card and bet 'em as high as a cat's back and didn't care much whether he won or lost, so he got action. He liked to win, naturally, and no kid with a new red wagon ever was happier than Charlie when he found himself pocket-rich for the short spell, and gave a magnificent dinner to the beauty and chivalry of the ringside and Wall street aboard the steamship Paris at her pier in New York. For a climax, Vincent Richards, then one of the greatest professional amateurs of the tennis business, came down the curving stairs with his wife, Gushee, on his arm, signifying that he had turned frankly pro and would tour the country with Charlie's troupe.

Gushee, herself, is a somebody, the girl who, on leaving the home of a condescending climber who was trying to do the Indian rope trick in New York society, turned to her hostess and with lovely sarcasm, said: "Well, good-by, youse. And don't think it ain't been charming."

Ship's Gold Service Used At Dinner

THEY DINED off the gold service that night aboard the Paris, and Charlie wrung the necks of many bottles of imprisoned laughter. He said, afterward, that as he sat there in center of the head table, with his dress shirt creaking and the little bubbles dancing out of his glass, he could not keep his thoughts out of Pixley & Ehler's beanery on Van Buren street, Chicago, where he had lived on 15-cent meals one cold winter not long before.

"I would look at that pheasant and think of those beans and brown bread at Pixley's," Charlie said, "and look at that gold stuff and think of Pixley's tin forks and look at the champagne glasses and think of Pixley's Java mugs, without handles and as big as a slopjar, and I would say to myself, 'Pyle, this ain't you.'"

Everybody knows that Charlie lassoed Red Grange at the University of Illinois in the fall of 1926, persuading him not to wait for his degree next spring, and took him on the road for a professional football career that earned them half a million, all told. And everybody knows that he smashed the amateur monopoly of tennis receipts with a troupe that included not only Richards, but Suzanne Lenglen and Mary Brown. But it has been overlooked that Charlie conquered an almost religious prejudice in the public mind against professionalism in both sports. You would have thought he had seduced some fair virgin, so fierce was the wrath over his enticement of Red Grange, a penniless student, away from his life of toil at spoilie wages and profitless adulation at Champagne, to cash in on his reputation. That Grange did not hang onto his money is another story, but after Red had lost most of it going along with Pyle in other risky promotions, he still gave Pyle a good profit—Pyle was goofy, yes, but he was honest.

He Was Happiest With Freak Show

NOWADAYS the star football player naturally expects to turn pro for a few years and nobody minds, but that was a time when Bo McMillan, another poor college star, was moved to arise at the coaches' meeting in New York to plead guilty, as though to an offense against society, admitting that he had played pro after college, explaining that he had done it to pay his college debts, and promising to err no more. Tennis, too, although even more hypocritical and dishonest than college football, was regarded as a lovely flower of American culture which would wither and die at the first touch of honest professionalism. Others have received the profits of Charlie's nerve and honest originality, for he went broke in football, along with Red, and was elbowed out of professional tennis, too.

He was a two-headed calf man at heart. He was happiest in later years with the monstrosities of his freak show, the mule-faced woman from Texas, who would munch wisps of hay on her high pitch at the Chicago Fair, and the little coal miner who was ossified but worried about his poor brother who didn't ossify and being, now, too old to dig coal, was dependent on the ossified man's earnings. They were his kind of showfolks and he seemed to enjoy and marvel at them as much as the customers who paid money to gape and, sometimes, to faint in horror at such foul pranks of nature on blameless fellow creatures.

We always end such stories with the prayer, "Green be the sod above him," and this is no case in which to break the tradition.

Edna Ferber's Story

EDNA "FLUFF" FERBER, out in Appleton, Wis., had her offer of a job. You'll find the story in her autobiography, "A Peculiar Treasure" (Doubleday, $3). Fifteen dollars a week, reporting for the big-city paper, The Milwaukee Journal. "Telephone," the editor had said. But for a long-distance call, in 1906, you had to go down to the central office. As she waited in the booth for her connection, heart beating fast, she heard a fellow townsman chat with the operator outside.

"That's Ferber's girl, isn't it?"

"Yeh."

"She the one is a reporter?"

"Yeh, she's calling up Milwaukee, The Journal there, she says they want her to go to work for them in Milwaukee."

"Hm. Wonder a girl like that wouldn't try to do something decent, like teaching school."

You can see it, you can hear it, you can feel it, you almost smell that central office. Edna Ferber has that gift of putting America on paper; in her stories and in her autobiography. You love Appleton and Emporia with her as you read; you feel with her that "the ultimate in exciting luxury" is to lie back in a streamlined train watching the United States of America flow by you; the wheat fields of Kansas, the identical permanent waves in the hair of girls of Nebraska, the hot gleam of the sun on new cars on the Arizona highways, the Main Street neon signs of all the county seats of 48 States.

In Love With America

"THERE IS about it a naive and unfinished quality that appeals to the imagination," especially in the West, she says. "I don't think it's nobler or better or more moral or desirable." (Oh, doesn't she?) "It seems to me to be fresher, more stimulating, more vital." We all felt that fresh vitality pulsing in Edna Ferber's Emma McChesney, the first business woman in American fiction, and still the best, 25 years ago. You feel it here in Miss Ferber's sketches of her Jewish mother, who seems to have been a considerable percentage of the original of Scotch Emma. We felt it in "Cimarron" and "Show Boat," in "Come and Get It" and in a host of singing American short stories, such as "Meadowlark."

And you feel, too, that there is a naive and unfinished quality to Miss Ferber's colorful conception of America. The words she herself chooses to describe her "Cimarron" are "bounce and vitality;" why, then, does her voice turn shrill in referring to critics who have suggested that she may lack subtlety? And why, when complaining of American writers who read and respect the great and melancholy Russians, does she try to tell her own Horatio Alger story as if it, too, were a Russo-American tragedy?

Fortunately, she does not succeed. Her immense gusto, her passion for this continent which she knows so well and has so memorably put onto paper, overcomes her own best efforts to make herself a tragic heroine. "I didn't want to be a writer," she says. "The stage was my one love. * * * To this day I regard myself as a blighted Bernhardt." Maybe so; but Edna Ferber was also a born writer. She loves her books as a mother loves her babies. She may criticize them herself, but let any one else dare! She writes of her beloved agony of writing as something like "having a baby every day for so many hours daily;" in fact, there are pages in this autobiography on the art and business and inevitability of writing which rank with some of the pages in Somerset Maugham's "Summing Up."

(Somerset Maugham writes a footnote in that book in this week's Saturday Evening Post on reading for pleasure: Detective stories, and Hazlitt's essays, and anthologies, and on Dickens as England's greatest novelist. Don't miss it.)

You'll meet the "blighted Bernhardt" motif off and on throughout "A Peculiar Treasure." In a way it was responsible for the joyous success of "Show Boat," the peak of Edna Ferber's whole happy life: "It doesn't seem possible that any one ever had so much sheer fun, gayety, satisfaction and money out of the writing of any one piece of work," she says, "as I have had out of 'Show Boat,' and she makes you almost shout and weep with her as you read. But Edna Ferber's life has not been exactly blighted. She is at her best when most triumphant; you wish she wouldn't apologize for renting Ivar Kreuger's penthouse apartment, and make believe she didn't love it.

A Definition Of America

SHE ASKS the reader to take this book as "the story of an American Jewish family in the last half-century." You can do it only if you understand Miss Ferber's warm-hearted definition of America as "the Jew among the nations. It is resourceful, adaptable, maligned, envied, feared, imposed upon. It is warm hearted, overfriendly, quick witted, lavish, colorful; given to extravagant speech and gestures; its people are travelers and wanderers by nature, moving, shifting, restless; swarming in Fords, in ocean liners; craving entertainment; volatile—the schnuckle among the nations of the world."

In that sense, of course, William Allen White, of Emporia, of whom Edna Ferber paints one loving portrait in this book, is as Jewish as Morris Ernst, of whom she paints another. * * * Well, maybe he is, though I don't think that is quite what Miss Ferber meant to say. There is a deep kinship between the Puritan and the Jew, seldom adequately realized.

"Ferber's girl," in the Appleton telephone booth, was calling not only Milwaukee, but America. She still is. Some of the honest contradictions which strike the reader of this book suggest that Miss Ferber is on her way to writing deeper and better books than any in her past. If only she drops the penthouse filet mignon touches and goes back to good, reliable roast beef medium.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Peace Can Still Be Saved

ALL OBSERVERS seem to agree, and the various polls confirm what they report, that a great majority of the American people believe that a world war is in the making, and that the chances are against the United States being able to stay out of it. If this opinion is true, the prospect is indeed awful. For whatever the outcome, another world war would be one of the great catastrophes of all time.

For my own part, I do not believe that war is inevitable, and, from what I can learn, this is the view of the men, here and abroad, who have the best means of knowing the actual situation in the world. If the governments with the backing of public opinion are sufficiently cool, clear-sighted and resolute, the peace can still be saved by diplomacy.

Situation Termed At Critical Stage

THE SITUATION, though not at all desperate, is critical. To say that it is critical means more specifically that, according to the most reliable information available, there are now in progress negotiations of one sort and another among Germany, Italy and Japan, and among factions within these nations, on which depend the decision whether there will or will not be war. Apparently, it is Japan which will cast the deciding vote.

The reason why Japan has the deciding vote is that Great Britain and France are now too strong in Europe to be attacked by Germany and Italy alone. Though London and Paris would suffer terrific damage in an attack from the air, they cannot be conquered from the air. Their naval superiority is overwhelmingly greater, and the French army, standing behind the Maginot line, is still the best army in the world. Backed up by the resources of the British Empire which the navy and the merchant marine can bring, the military power of France is probably sufficient to make a European war an impossible adventure.

That is where Japan comes into it. If Japan were to join in the attack by striking at Singapore, at the Dutch East Indies, and Australia, the British would have more enemies than they can handle. If they sent enough warships to the Far East to hold Japan they would not have enough warships left in Europe to hold Italy and Germany; if they did not send warships to the Far East, and so let Japan get to Singapore, their empire from India to Australia would collapse.

One Faction Eager To Try For Prize

THERE IS a faction in Japan, it would appear, which is greatly tempted to try for this enormous prize. If Japan ever gets to Singapore, she will control a great supply of oil and one of the main supplies of rubber as against the whole world. But there is another faction in Japan who regard the adventure as too dangerous because of the risk that the United States might enter such a war. Their argument is that Japan is not strong enough to take the chance of a war with the United States. For in such a war, the Japanese navy would not dare to go to Singapore. And with Singapore held by the British and Panama held by the United States, Japan would be caught in a long-distance but tremendously effective blockade. Moreover, a war in which the United States took part would immediately redouble the resistance of the Chinese, and would probably cause even the Russians to move in the Far East.

As long as the Japanese think there is better than an even chance of the United States taking part in a world war, they are not likely to risk it. And if the Japanese will not risk it, there is a very good chance that Rome and Berlin will not risk it either.

Situation Outlined In Simplest Terms

REDUCED TO ITS simplest terms the situation would seem to be this: Italy—Germany vs. Britain—France, two against two=no war. Italy—Germany—Japan vs. Britain—France, three against two =war very likely. Italy—Germany—Japan vs. Britain—France—United States—Russia=no war.

If these are the calculations which will decide the outcome, whether there is to be war or whether there is not to be war, then it is not hard to understand why the war-party in Rome, Berlin, and Tokyo is so angry at the American armament program, and at the President for helping the French and British to get airplanes, and the very best airplanes at that, and at the report that he regards it as a vital interest of the United States that the French army and British navy should not be destroyed.

The armament program has impressed the peace party in Japan; the help that is being given to the British and French, and also, one might add, the Netherlands, has strengthened the peace party, and there is such a thing, in Germany and Italy. As a result, the chances of war are almost certainly much less than they were before the President began asking for more armaments and began helping the British and French to strengthen their defenses.

Time Held Ripe To Forget Politics

THERE ARE MANY things that the Administration has done which seem to me unwise or badly done. It ought to have gagged Secretary Ickes. It ought not, I believe, to keep the country divided in a partisan struggle by such provocative appointments as that of Mr. Amlie, or by such stubbornness as it displayed over the deficiency appropriation for WPA. It ought to put national unity ahead of all other considerations, and having done that itself, it could ask the Republicans and the rebellious Democrats to do likewise. That is fundamental to any policy.

On the question of "secrecy," the problem is more difficult. For if the President says publicly all that he knows about the dangers of the world situation, he may increase the dangers by arousing passion and he will surely be accused of inciting to war; if he tries to tell the Congress confidentially what he knows and fears, his confidences will be betrayed and he will be accused of having concealed purposes. He is damned if he does and damned if he doesn't. But all things considered, he would do well to go to Congress and lay before it a full and frank exposition of what he is doing to avert a world war.

For that is undoubtedly what he is trying to do. He is making mistakes. But that he is trying to avert war, that this is his whole purpose, is, I think, absolutely indisputable. Helping France and Britain to buy arms can have no other purpose but to prevent war. Letting them get arms is not going to make them start a war. If we refused to let them get arms they would still have to fight if they were attacked. So letting them have arms is one way of making war less likely.

Prevention Of War Must Be Object

AND SINCE almost everyone, as Mr. Hoover has made plain, thinks we could not stay out of a war, surely the prevention of war must be our object. Is there anyone who wishes to go on record as believing that he does not care whether a world war breaks out? Is there anyone who thinks the American Government ought to do nothing to prevent it? Is there anyone who wants to take the responsibility of saying that the United States should tell Japan, Germany and Italy that, so far as we are concerned, they are perfectly safe if they decide to wage a world war? Whoever creates that impression abroad in these days of critical decisions is taking an awful responsibility upon himself.

Unity Need Is Stressed

By Mark Sullivan

Tension Apparent

WHAT IS WRITTEN here does not bear directly on the most important aspect of current commotion—foreign relations and the tension between President and Congress. But these notes on a lesser matter may throw light on the greater one.

Some days ago I wrote about President Roosevelt's appointment of the alleged radical Mr. Thomas R. Amlie to the Interstate Commerce Commission. I said I thought Mr. Roosevelt did it just as a little joke, a bit of puckishness. The law says that not more than six members of the commission shall belong to one party. There were already six Democrats. Consequently Mr. Roosevelt had to appoint someone not a Democrat. Ordinarily that means, appoint a Republican. That was the natural expectation. But, I surmise, Mr. Roosevelt saw an opportunity to defeat expectation, and thereby create titillating surprise. He appointed Mr. Amlie, one of the little group of Wisconsin members of the House whose official party designation is "Progressive." Then he told a press conference that the only requirement on him was to appoint a non-Democrat—and Mr. Amlie was a non-Democrat. Mr. Roosevelt used that word with smiling relish. The whole incident seemed to give him pleasure. It was just a bit of fun-loving puckishness on his part. I admitted it might not be the best contribution to the public service, but it was good, clean fun.

Fellow Columnists Register Dissent

THAT WAS my surmise. But I find that some of my fellow-columnists do not agree with me. They—seasoned, stout-minded fellows—probably would think I am too young and trusting. They—cold-eyed realists—would regard me as too starry-eyed and inexperienced to be able properly to assay the motives of public men. They assign a different motive to Mr. Roosevelt. And since all three of them agree, I suppose they must be right, and I wrong. I quote their judgments about Mr. Roosevelt's motive:

Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner—"The President heartily dislikes the I. C. C. and knew the Amlie appointment would set the commissioners back on their heels."

Mr. Paul Mallon—"Only satisfactory guess why Mr. Roosevelt named left-wing, tip-feather Amlie to the Interstate Commerce Commission is that the President does not like the I. C. C.—and deeply. This is the commonly accepted surmise in Congressional cloakrooms. There is a precedent for it. Mr. Roosevelt appointed Hugo Black to the Supreme Court at the time he had the same feeling about the Court as he now has about I. C. C."

Gen. Hugh Johnson—"A use of the appointive power to slap his opponents in the face . . . Childish petulance and rule-or-ruin attitude in appointments . . . a gesture of contempt and revenge."

Gen. Johnson supports his point by saying the appointment of Mr. Amlie to the I. C. C. was in the same spirit as the appointment of Mr. Black to the Supreme Court. The Black appointment, Gen. Johnson says, was "neither proper nor appropriate." It was made as a gesture of derision toward the Court, and of revenge against those who opposed Mr. Roosevelt's attempt to change the Court.

Unity Held Need At Perilous Times

I SUPPOSE we shall have to admit there is some convincing force in the agreement of three observers that Mr. Roosevelt feels strong rancor against men or bodies whom he cannot control. This is disturbing. For it suggests a trait of the type of men who find it difficult to endure opposition, who like their way to be done, who resent being checked or being obliged to consult with others and arrive at programs by the processes of discussion and compromise.

That Mr. Roosevelt should avoid this trait is about as heavy an obligation as rests on the Presidential shoulders. The world is near enough to war to call for unity within the United States. The state of American feeling will not permit that our policy about war, neutrality, and the like be determined by one man. The country would consent to a policy arrived at by the President in consultation with the appropriate leaders in Congress. It must be true consultation, true give-and-take and true meeting of minds—not a case of a Presidential view insisted upon, and unwillingly accepted by a supine Congress. The unhappy fact is that as we approach the necessity for a national policy about war, the President is at loggerheads with Congress, not only on this point but on others, including the Amlie appointment.

London-Paris Axis

By Barnet Nover

The Broadened Alliance

THROUGH the compulsion of necessity, the Anglo-French alliance has been broadened into something it was never intended to be, at least not by Great Britain. The unity of this partnership of democratic powers is now such, if the statements made by M. Bonnet on January 26 and by Neville Chamberlain on Monday have any meaning, that they are prepared to join forces to meet a threat from any quarter and in any area vital to either nation.

The French foreign minister had told the Chamber of Deputies that "in case of war in which the two countries were involved all the forces of Great Britain would be at the disposal of France just as all forces of France would be at the disposal of Great Britain."

Mr. Chamberlain goes even further. M. Bonnet's statement had reference to what Great Britain and France would jointly do were both nations involved in war. The British prime minister has now made clear what Great Britain is prepared to do if France is threatened. Said he:

"I feel bound to make it plain that the solidarity of interest by which France and his country are united is such that any threat to the vital interests of France, from whatever quarter it came, must evoke the immediate co-operation of this country."

WHAT DOES this mean? When the Anglo-French alliance came into being two years ago it took the form of a substitute for the Locarno treaty which Hitler had scrapped on March 7, 1936.

Under the Locarno pact, France's security against German attack (and conversely, German security against French attack) was guaranteed by Great Britain and Italy. In place of that arrangement Great Britain and France pledged to come to each other's aid in the event of an attack by Germany on either. They were, however, not pledged to help each other in the event of a war arising elsewhere than in western Europe or occasioned by the aggressions of any other power than the Third Reich.

As it happens, France, in 1937, still regarded the maintenance of the status quo in Central Europe no less than in Western Europe as one of its "vital interests." She was allied to Czecho-Slovakia as she remains allied to Poland, Yugoslavia, Rumania and Soviet Russia. Yet at no time was Great Britain prepared to assure France of any support in the event the republic became involved in a war arising out of its treaty obligations to any of its eastern allies.

The furthest that Neville Chamberlain showed any disposition to go to meet French wishes of general support was to point out that British neutrality in the event of any German aggression in Central and Eastern Europe could not be taken for granted.

NOW, however, the Paris government has solemn assurances that an attack on the "vital interests of France" will bring Great Britain to France's side. The pledge of support which Great Britain persistently refused to give France in the past, with fatal consequences to the status quo in Central Europe, she gives her now.

Why? The answer is to be found in the Spanish situation and in the crisis now arising from it.

For more than two years Great Britain's policy with respect to Spain has been based on the idea that no matter what the outcome of the civil war might be, the status quo in the Mediterranean would remain unchanged. To make certain of this Great Britain demanded and received from Italy a pledge to that effect and a further pledge (embodied in an exchange of notes at the time of the Anglo-Italian agreement of April, 1937) that Italian troops would be withdrawn from Spain, if not before the end of the war, then as soon as possible after its termination.

YET ON SUNDAY, Virginio Gayda, Italy's journalistic spokesman on foreign affairs, indicated that Italian troops might not be withdrawn from Spain at the cessation of hostilities. Though the military objectives has been achieved the continued presence of these troops was necessary to achieve certain unnamed political objectives.

What this means is not hard to discover. As long as there are Italian troops in Spain, Spain is a pistol pointed at France's head. Mussolini knows that. But so do Daladier and Chamberlain. And so, too, does Hitler. With that pistol in his possession, Duce and Fuehrer would be in a much better position to intimidate Great Britain and France into accepting a Mediterranean Munich than without it. And it is difficult to believe that the mere fact that he is bound by treaty pledges and oral commitments to withdraw his troops from the Iberian peninsula will prove sufficient to compel him to do so. The path of international relations is strewn with broken pledges. It is doubtful if Mussolini would hesitate to break another if, in so doing, any useful Italian purpose would be served thereby.

IT IS ALSO probable that in this game of blackmail which he is preparing to play, Mussolini will have the support of Hitler. The axis has its enormous advantages to both of the totalitarian partners; neither can afford to scrap it without courting an isolation which can be dangerous to both. But since any upset in the status quo in the Mediterranean would endanger British no less than French interests, Great Britain is under compulsion to prevent Mussolini and Hitler from pulling the trigger of the Spanish gun.

Possibly Chamberlain's strong language will intimidate the totalitarian powers. But that must not be taken for granted. Mussoline has staked far too much on his Spanish policy to retreat. On the other hand, both of the democratic powers have so often capitulated to Fascist pressure that Berlin and Rome may discount the present show of strength. Something like a test of power—and nerves—is thus in the offing, with the outcome by no means clear.

Roberts' Defeat, 72-9, Worst Ever for Presidential Nominee

judicial appointments in their States."

Guffey has been seeking appointment of Michael A. Musmanno to the Third Circuit Court of Appeals which includes Pennsylvania. His choice is indorsed by John L. Lewis and the C. I. O., but Francis Biddle, counsel for the joint TVA committee, is reputed to have a better chance.

The Senate action was presaged last week when the Senate Judiciary Committee disapproved the nomination 15 to 3. Action was based solely on the testimony of the two Virginia Senators that the traditional right of Senators to be consulted on judicial appointments within their States had been ignored in this case and an appointment made which was "personally offensive" to them.

President Roosevelt is expected to comment on the action in a letter to Judge Roberts. He told newsmen last week he will write Roberts a letter that will be very interesting.

As hearings on the Amlie appointment opened before a Senate Interstate Commerce sub-committee, the Wisconsin nominee to the I. C. C. told Senators he is opposed to Communist aims and program. While he testified to his belief that public ownership of railroads will "ultimately" come, he said if confirmed he will act as the agent of Congress to carry out the letter and spirit of existing laws.

Three witnesses immediately took the stand to oppose him. They were:

William D. Carroll, chairman of the Wisconsin Democratic State central committee, who said Amlie "is one of the most radical men in Wisconsin," and filed a copy of Amlie's pamphlet, "The Forgotten Man," which he said opposed the private profit system and urged "scrapping of the Constitution" in favor of "a new social order."

Maurice Fitzsimmons, Democratic member of the Wisconsin Legislature, who said Amlie lacked transportation experience, was "obnoxious" to a majority of Wisconsin Progressives and in a 1935 speech called President Roosevelt's declaration that no one should starve, "cheap, dirty politics."

Luther M. Walter, Chicago lawyer and co-trustee of the Chicago Great Western Railway, who declared Amlie is "just a plain political upheaver" who wants to destroy the profit system. Walter said he "cannot believe the President knew what this man stood for."

Hearings will be resumed this morning, with Walter again on the stand. Amlie led off yesterday's testimony and no witness spoke in his behalf. It was learned that Mayor LaGuardia of New York and James H. McGill, Valparaiso, Ind., manufacturer, later may take the stand in his support.

Hearings were abruptly recessed to permit committee members to vote in the Senate on the Roberts nomination.

Appointments approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee without objection were Former Gov. Allred of Texas to be Federal judge of the Southern Texas District; Michael L. Igoe to be Federal judge in the Northern Illinois District, and William J. Campbell to be Northern Illinois district attorney.

A judiciary sub-committee meantime was studying the writings of Dean Clark, of Yale Law School, who favored the President's court plan, before passing on his nomination for a judgeship. Another subcommittee considering the nomination of a Nevada district attorney was awaiting the recommendations of Senators Pittman and McCarran of that State.

Reading from a prepared statement, Amlie told of his part in formation of the Farmer-Labor Political Federation, of which he was chairman in 1935, and "another conference of liberals" in Chicago two years later, both of which, he said, were followed by Communist attacks upon himself. He said he played the leading role in barring Communists from the second conference.

Amlie accused Representative Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin, of "monstrous distortion" in House attacks on his record, charging the man who succeeded him in the House "was unable to distinguish between a hypothetical description and actual advocacy."

Questioned by Chairman Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, Amlie said he thought reorganization of the I. C. C. is "purely a matter for Congress" and any attempted reorganization of the railroads must supply adequate facilities for any return of prosperity.

The nominee said he largely shared the views of I. C. C. Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman on public ownership of railroads as a theoretical proposition. He said he believed it would one day become a reality "because it is inevitable." He added that if Congress ever attempts to take over the railroads it would be "invaluable" to have a man on the commission interested in the success of Government ownership.

Senators Schwartz (Democrat), of Wyoming; Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, and Reed (Republican), of Kansas, questioned the witness.

Women Flock to Interesting Positions At N. Y. World's Fair

New York, Feb. 6.

Out where our World's Fair is getting ready to open, several hundred of the town's more talented women are very busy these days. Feminine participation in the fair is vitally important—and a classy cohort of our sisters has been lined up to see that we do and get our share of what is going.

Marcia Connor, of course, is the fashion and color executive, and many of the results of her labors are already in the windows along Fifth avenue. Priscilla Ogden Dalmas has one of the most interesting jobs. She has to keep the fair's scale model up to date, so that the rest of the gang knows just how the building projects are keeping the pace. Clara B. Mason is consultant on art. Esther Johnson is responsible for the care of the herds of children who will visit the grounds. And cute little Kay Swift, one of my favorite girls, is the chief music assistant.

They dug into the newspaper business, too, for many of the girls on the fair job. Lorena Hickock, a top-notch reporter, is in charge of youth projects, while two other well-known Fourth Estate sisters, Beatrice Mabry and Monica Barry Walsh, fill important niches in the set-up. There are plenty of women in the technical end, too, such as Sara Love, who makes charts and graphs, and Martha Foley, who is a civil engineer.

Add to these the scores of clerks, stenographers and receptionists and you'll quickly see that there's more to our little old County Fair than Mr. Grover Whalen and his gardenia.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—When it comes to churches, we have them as old as the next place, thanks. There's no more charming spot in town than old St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, down on Tenth street—a foundation that goes back to the Dutch settlement of Nieuw Amsterdam. A week ago Sunday the church celebrated the 287th anniversary of the death of Gov. Peter Stuyvesant, and the noted actor, Walter Huston (star of "Knickerbocker Holiday"), in costume, laid a wreath on his excellency's tomb in the old church. The Dutch consul general, Mr. Montyn, was present, as were several current Stuyvesants. It was a beautiful and dramatic ceremony—in the heart of an old New York that has become entirely another world.

Katharine Hepburn is still about town, probably to do a play. I hear she declined to pose with other film stars at the local premiere of "Gunga Din," remarking, "I'm not working in v. movies, thank you." Wonder if Kate has been asked, lately? . . . Speaking of movie actors, nothing is so terrifying to a film company as to have one of its big names in town without checking in. For instance, Ginger Rogers has been here resting up and visiting a select few nwight spots—and not for days did she look into the office of the firm which hires her. When she did, they all sighed with relief, because they only knew by rumor that she was in the East at all!

Beautiful Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt seems to be always in hot water in her dress businesses. Now there is a report that her current venture is having its griefs and woes. Poor Gloria—so lovely and so bedeviled in the business world.

Have you seen a copy of Clare Boothe's "Kiss the Boys Goodbye?" It has been published—and with a preface that is going to stir up a mess of dust, here and there. All playwrights save Bernard Shaw should be forbidden to write prefaces to their plays. La Boothe's is more or less dynamite, especialy south of the Potomac.

Famous Sayings of Missing Men

"Now don't you worry your little head about these bills. Daddy'll look after them."

"Why on earth don't you go on and join the club? There are a lot of fine women in it? . . . The dues? . . . Well, what of 'em? I wouldn't let a little thing like that stop me."

"Here, you take the front page . . . No, no, I don't want it . . . No, I want to look over the funnies and the want ads first."

"No, sister, no! . . . No, it's no use to ask your mother . . . No, I said NO!"

"Now you just go on out and have some fun with the girls. No, don't worry about the children. I'll take care of them . . . No, I really want to get better acquainted with them."

"No, I wouldn't have too much to do with her, either—even if she is the next-door neighbor . . . No, I don't think very much of a woman who gets out and cuts the grass in her bathing suit."

"Why on earth don't you stay in bed till noon . . . Well, other women do. No, no, don't get up. I can just get some ham and eggs at Tony's."

"Are you going to wear that old coat again this year?"

"Say, isn't it about time we had the Prosers over to play bridge? You know, he seems like a nice fellow . . . The Gabbs? . . . They did? . . . Sure, let's go."

"No, no, I'll just have the tailor fix it . . . No, it's in a sort of difficult place to mend . . . No, I don't think you really have the right kind of a needle."

"I wouldn't have meat. Why don't you just make a nice salad or something? Or say—why don't we go out somewhere for a change?"

"You know that rug's beginning to look shabby. How many years has it been on the floor, anyway?"

"Say, there's a good pair of pants in my closet that might do somebody some good. And I guess you might as well give away that old Palm Beach suit while you're at it . . . The golf shoes? . . . Sure, give 'em to the Goodwill. There's no use of them cluttering up space."

"For dinner? . . . Well, now, let's see. Why don't you have a good pork roast . . . and garnish it with apples? . . . What? . . . Lemon or mince? . . . Well, which is easier to make?"

"Hello! . . . I just called up to say I'd be about ten minutes late tonight . . . Well, now, let's see . . . I guess I ought to make it by 6:35—no, I'd better say 6:37½."

"Oh, say! Where's that stuff you scour the bathtub with? . . . Wait, I've found it . . . Well, say, where do you want me to hang this towel?"

"JUNIOR!"

"No, no, honey, Hitler's not going to do anything. He's just bluffing. Anyway, if he did, he couldn't hurt us."

"Now, what program do you want me to dial for?"

"What did you say awhile ago about fixing the faucet? . . . Oh, yes, and don't let me forget to bring home an electric light fuse tomorrow."

"I believe this IS the wrong road . . . Yes. I'm going to ask the very first person I meet."

"Well, I see that all the women are getting their spring hats."

"Wait!" Don't lift that! No, I'll do it. No, those card tables are pretty heavy."

"Gracie Brash? . . . Oh, she's a nice enough girl, but anybody can see she's man crazy . . . Mrs. Wiggle? . . . No, I don't think she has any 'it.' Except in her own imagination . . . Miss Snooks? . . . Say, I could see through her 'simple little me' racket in a minute . . . Mrs. Mantilla? . . . Oh, the one who thinks she's so exotic . . . Miss Musher? . . . Say, if you'd stick your finger at her it'd go all the way through . . . Betty Smirk? . . . Oh, yes, cute but ordinary . . . Miss Stiff? . . . Say, now there's really a charming woman."

Romance Threatened by Mother's Mean Interference, Girl Asks Whether to Marry Immediately

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 20, a high school graduate with one year's business school training. I have been working for more than a year at a salary of $15 a week. For three years I have been engaged to a boy, now 24, who is making $30 a week. We are members of the same church and very much in love with each other. My parents are very good to me, in the way of providing good food, clothing and education, but my mother seems to lack a "shown" love for me, which I so often feel the need of. I have a younger sister and two younger brothers who seem to be recipients of the love which I am denied.

Here is my problem—both mother and I are quick-tempered, and sometimes we quarrel over nothing. Here lately, neither of us speak after a quarrel, except when absolutely necessary. It is useless for me to speak, for if I do, she either ignores me or gives me a very curt reply. She argues not only with me, but with father, who is very mild and seldom speaks his mind, although frequently nagged about petty things.

My mother insists on telling my fiance unfavorable things about me, requesting him not to repeat them to me. This I know to be a fact, for I have overheard her doing it. A short time ago, she told him she had "fixed" my savings (about $500, accumulated since childhood) so that I can never touch it. She is controller of the funds because I am under age. At Christmas, I received a gift of $5 which I put into another bank.

Lots of other things have happened for which I feel I am not to blame. I've tried to work along with her, although she says I don't. She tells my fiance I don't appreciate kindness, always want my own way, and ever so many other things that both of us believe are not so. He's at the house nearly every night and on holidays and Sundays all day, so he has a fair idea of how things go—and if I'm in the wrong, he doesn't hesitate to say so, in a nice and understanding way. She also tells him that she's "through" with me; isn't concerned over anything I do, and that she's never going to forgive me. But I have no idea what she means by not forgiving me. Now, for some unknown reason, she forbids me to have him to dinner any more.

I believe all this dissension is due to the fact that mother knows we plan to be married next June. She doesn't want me to get married, and I cannot understand why, because he is very good to me, and eve.. though our combined incomes will be only $45 a week, I will be very happy and we can adjust ourselves accordingly. I feel that I would be ever so much happier with him than living as I am now—so miserable and unhappy.

Here is what I want to know: Since we have furnishings for two rooms (which mother helped me select), that will be paid off in a couple of months, and since I have a hope chest filled with ever so many things, and about $200 saved, and owe very little—should we tell mother that we are going to be married very quietly now? Or should we wait until June, as we planned? I await your answer. Sincerely, H. E. M.

Unnatural Jealousy

DEAR H. E. M.: Offhand, one might say that your mother seems to be bitterly jealous of your happy courtship; and in that offhand statement one may be striking very close to the root cause of her unnaturally vindictive attitude. I am convinced that she is jealous, and that her jealousy is occasioned by her own phychological immaturity. Either she resents the fact that you are just entering upon a phase of life which she believes herself to be leaving—namely, the period of greatest attractiveness to men—or, she resents the fact that your erstwhile wholehearted filial devotion to her is now a secondary consideration, as compared to your love for your fiance. She may be bent on disputing and thwarting that division of affection to the last ditch, even to the extent of throwing a monkey wrench into the romance, if possible, and if no other expedient promises to prevail.

There is an additional possibility that your mother may now be passing through the climacteric, without benefit of such special medical care and instruction as would enable her to keep a serene mental, emotional and nervous balance. This is suggested by the fact that she seems to be something of a sorehead generally, snapping at your father as well as yourself, and pettishly nagging him about trifles.

However, supposing all these things are true, there is little you personally can do toward helping her. About the most you can do is save yourself. Bear with her as best you can, keeping your own disposition sweet, and your attitude consistently loving and magnanimous. No advantage is to be gained in adding to a given quarrel (not of your own making) by sulking in injured or intimidated silence afterward. If you would prove to your own and your fiance's satisfaction the injustice of her attitude, refuse to be drawn into any ignoble "tit-for-tat" exchange of invectives and reproaches.

Your job, as I see it, is to save your romance from spoliation at her hands—since this seems to be her unworthy aim. If you would avoid planting the seed of suspicion in your fiance's mind that this may be a case of "like mother, like daughter," you must try, in so far as is possible, to rise bravely and blandly above her accusations and insinuations by refusing to fight back; by deflecting quarrels if and when this can be done (which means acquiring heroic patience and self-control); by refraining from rehashing, in detail, every painful domestic incident with the man, and by steadfastly holding to your apparently very fine companionship with him

Don't make the mistake of expecting him to take a mother's place in your life; don't ask for pity (directly or indirectly), or give it to yourself. Don't lament the fact that your mother seems neither to love nor to understand you. Rather, show some compassion for her. Far better to say, "poor mother," and mean it, than "poor me, so ill used, so sorely abused." It will set much better with the man; is far better guaranteed to intensify his sympathetic championship of you.

With her attitude what it is, it may be just as well if he does not spend as much time at your home in the future as he was wont to in the past. Don't make an issue of the fact she no longer will have him to dinner. Accept her decision without dispute. Explain the situation to the man, —am what her attitude is, that you are inexpressibly sorry, and that you are looking forward to the time when he can have dinner at your house every night. Be a good sport about it, in other words.

Now, about your marriage plans. If it can be managed, wait until June, as originally planned. But if the situation becomes utterly unbearable, through no fault of your own, and in spite of your best efforts to endure—then I think you would be justified in pushing the marriage date ahead. Providing, of course, that you are financially in a position to swing the proposition, and that the man is as eager to set it ahead as you are. But don't ever give him the impression that you would be marrying him—either hastily or at leisure—as a means of getting out of the frying pan. It just might backfire, at some distant future date. M. H.

Arthritis Is Most Common of Chronic Ailments; Needs Complex Treatment

The curse of the locomotor system of the body is the joints. Barring accidents and a few rare diseases, most of us get through life without ever hearing from our bones, muscles or tendons. But arthritis, the inflammation of the joints, is likely to hit all of us at some time or other if we live long enough.

It has been estimated that 2 per cent of the population is sick all the time. It is not always the same people, of course. John Jones has pneumonia and is part of the 2 per cent for a while. Then he gets well and resigns his place to Henry Smith. This fluctuating personnel in the acute diseases, however, surmounts a basis of chronic ailments—people who remain in the 2 per cent column year after year.

The symptoms of arthritis are pain, swelling, stiffness and disability of one or more joints. There are many forms of arthritis, including acute arthritis, which we understand far better than we do the chronic kind. Acute arthritis is always an infection, and usually terminates favorably.

Many doctors think that all chronic arthritis is infectious, also. Others think that some cases are nutritional in origin. Two main forms of arthritis occur. One occurs mostly in young adults, affects many joints and is extremely crippling. The other occurs in older people, affects one or a few joints, and usually runs a course of about a year, leaving only slight stiffness behind. It frequently affects the spine and leaves a "poker back."

The first form—that occurring in young people—is called arthritis deformans. Few measures in treatment are beneficial. Most of the good results claimed for different remedies have been successful in the latter form.

Of those remedies, the name is legion. As one of my friends who has handled his share of arthritis patients said, "If all the so-called cures for arthritis were laid end to end every five minutes they would extend from here back to the birth of Job."

The arthritic patient must make up his mind that no one treatment is going to magically cure him. It is a complex disorder and many parts of the body—the digestive tract, the blood, the sinuses, the tonsils, as well as the joints—are out of line.

Still remain the three great standbys of treatment:

Rest. Psychology. Heat.

If the arthritis is going to get well, it tends to get well of itself. Rest will help this. Encouragement—psychology—the patient with arthritis always needs. And heat relieves the pain even if it does not cure, and really promotes the healing process in all cases.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Dessert Is Nemesis of Most Reducers; Some Low Calorie Ones Are Here Suggested

THAT PART of the anatomy which doctors dub the buttocks and fashion writers term the derriere is apt to be the reducer's most aggravating figure problem. This pronounced curve below the small of the back, however, may be caused by sway back. The muscles are weak and the back sinks in too far.

Besides this bustle effect and the incurve of the small of the back, there is a protruding abdomen. All three figure faults disappear with the correction of swayback—or, if you prefer the technical term—lordosis.

There are several schools of thought as to how to go about this. One advocates sliding up and down a wall. Stand slightly away from a wall with feet parallel, and the entire back pressed snugly against the wall. Slide down and up without removing the small of the back from the wall. All the action should be in the hips and knees, the legs being bent for sliding down, and straightened to hoist you back up.

Floor Particularly good

Or you can flatten yourself out on the floor. The least arduous exercises as well as some of the best are those in which you lie on the back on the floor with knees flexed. The back is flattened by pushing the small of the back against the floor. This type of exercise is particularly good for a pronounced incurve.

Still another type designed to set you straight is done with the aid of a full-length mirror. Stand so that you can get a clear side view of yourself, hold the legs straight, and rock the pelvis back and forth. The position in which you look slimmest is the correct one. By studying the results in the mirror you gradually get the feel of the correct position.

Object to Stretch Spine

All these methods of exercising have their good points and the same object: to stretch the spine and strengthen the lower back and abdominal muscles so that the contours are up and in, not down and out. With the small of the back in alignment, the abdomen is flat, the hips tucked in and under.

Swayback is not hard to remedy, but a few daily exercises cannot make much dent in the habit of a lifetime. Back up your exercises with new habits of sitting and standing. Try always to sit with the body forming a right angle at the hips, with the lower abdominal muscles pulled up and the hips drawn under.

Never let the hips trail you in walking or climbing stairs. Try to keep them under the trunk and make them do the work instead of depending too much on the knees. And, as often as you remember when standing, pull the thigh muscles up tight and slowly but forcibly draw the buttocks together and in and under. Tucking the hips under—as your experiments before the mirror show you—pushes the small of the back out.

How to Make Your Bed . . Different!

By Mary Annette Decorating Hostess of The Hecht Co.

I'm not being un-grammatical. I mean just what I say. Design your own bed so that it will be different from any other. Starting with a box spring and good mattress, mounted on wooden legs, any number of effects can be obtained. For the one-room apartment, merely cover it with a tailored "throw" with a half dozen or more gayly colored pillows. For the bedroom, design an effective headboard of plywood, and paint it whatever color you wish. You then have a distinctive, comfortable bed and you aren't restricted to the conventional bed spread, but can cover it in whatever fabric and color you wish.

Monday Musicale a Success Despite Mme. Lehmann's Illness

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

FOR THE FIRST TIME this year, printed programs could not be followed yesterday morning at Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's Monday musicale. Lotte Lehmann, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, who was scheduled to appear with Lauritz Melchoir, Danish-born tenor of the "Met," had to cancel her part of the concert a couple of hours before it was to begin. A siege of laryngitis caused her to pack her bags and return to New York at about the time several hundred music lovers were assembling in the mammoth ballroom.

HOPE R. MILLER

But the show went on—and in fine form, too. Lauritz Melchoir, who is a favorite with Washington audiences, carried out his part of the program down to the last number. And Orlando Barera, Italian violinist, who happened to be in town for a brief stay before going on to Florida for a concert, was hastily summoned to take over the remaining section of the schedule. An hour before the musicale got under way, he and Paul Ulanowsky, accompanist for Mme. Lehmann, were practicing madly, working out enough numbers to fill in the gaps. So . . . when the program began, they were ready and waiting to step onto the stage and perform as if they had been rehearsing together for months.

Mr. Melchior, in a brief announcement, explained why Mme. Lehmann was not there; Mrs. Townsend introduced Mr. Barera and mentioned that he was appearing in a business suit instead of a cutaway because his formal wardrobe had already been shipped on to Florida; and the program proceeded smoothly from there to the finish.

As swanky a gathering as has attended one of Mrs. Townsend's concerts this season thundered its applause after each number; and despite the last-minute changes, the program was a success from first to last, and a fitting finale for the season's schedule of morning musicales.

Vandenbergs Among Those Feting Famous Tenor

Following the concert, Mrs. Townsend entertained at luncheon in honor of Mr. Melchior and his attractive wife. This event was the first in a flurry of parties swirling around them. Yesterday afternoon, Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg entertained at a tea and cocktail party for them; last evening they were guests of honor at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Harold H. Sims, of the British Embassy (Mrs. Sims is of Danish birth and has known the Melchoirs for sometime); and today the famous tenor and his wife, will be feted at a luncheon at which the Danish Minister and Mrs. Wadsted will entertain.

Red and white, Denmark's colors, were carried out in decorating the Vandenberg's apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel, where the Melchiors were feted at a tea and cocktail party. The hostess received informally, wearing a trim frock of apple green crepe, cut on simple lines with a floor-length skirt.

The company included a number of diplomats who are old friends of the Melchiors and a scattering of the Capital's confirmed music-lovers who have followed the famous tenor's career for many seasons.

Several Diplomats Noted at Party

To mention but a few who were present—there were the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted, the Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom, the Minister of Czecho-Slovakia and Mme. Fotitch, the Bulgarian Minister and Mme. Naoumoff, the Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Eickhoff, and the Charge d'Affaires of the Finnish Legation and Mme. von Numers.

Still others there were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Truxton Beale, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Sims, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja and Mr. and Mrs. Townsend.

Several in the tea and cocktail company were on hand for the dinner given for the Melchiors last evening. The party took place in Mr. and Mrs. Sims' apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel, and covers were laid for 18.

A noticeable diplomatic accent also was noted in Mrs. Townsend's luncheon company following the morning concert. The Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom were ranking guests. The Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted were in the foreign-corps group that included Christopher Bramwell, Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart and Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Sims, all of the British Embassy; also, Mr. and Mrs. Wilhelm Eickhoff and Agnar Jonsson, of the Danish Legation; George Duca, of the Rumanian Legation, and Robert Webster, of the South African Legation.

Lady Lister Kaye Among Guests

Others at the luncheon were Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Lady Lister Kaye, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, Mrs. Thomas Phillips, jr., of Pittsburgh; Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Flint, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Dr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Miss Elizabeth Howry, Miss Margaret Townsend, Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. C. Burke Elbrick, Robert Coe, Michael Werboff, William K. Ryan, Orlando Barera, Paul Ulanowsky and Ignace Strasfogel.

Among other luncheons following yesterday morning's concert was the one given by Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman in honor of Mrs. William Howard Taft. The party took place at the Mayflower Hotel. The 20 guests included Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador; Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mme. Bilmanis, wife of the Latvian Minister, and Mrs. Charles L. McNary.

Ickes and Wife to Leave On Speaking Tour

The Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold L. Ickes will leave Thursday for a trip to Chicago and the West Coast, where Secretary Ickes is scheduled to make a number of speeches.

They expect to be gone until the latter part of the month, and on their return trip will stop in Cleveland, where the Secretary will make his final speech on the tour.

Social and Musical Notables Form 'Quartet' at Final Concert

Underwood & Underwood.

This season of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's concerts closed wi th a bang (no musical criticism intended), yesterday morning when society flocked to hear Lauritz Melchior sing. Spotlig hts were most brilliant when they turned on the group above, composed (left to right) of Mme. Otto Wadsted, the wife of t he Danish Minister; Lauritz Melchior, Mme. Melchior, and the Danish Minister, himself.

Miss Wilson Becomes Bride

Col. James Sprigg Wilson, U. S. A., retired, and Mrs. Wilson, of Columbus, Ohio, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Margaret Western Wilson, to Richard A. Borel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Borel.

The former Miss Wilson, a graduate of the Columbia School for Girls, and Ohio State University, is a granddaughter of the late Capt. James E. Wilson, U. S. A., and of Capt. Charles B. Western, U. S. A. She is the great granddaughter of the late Gen. Thaddeus H. Stanton.

Mr. Borel also is a graduate of Ohio State and is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity.

Oliver Lerches Announce Birth Of a Daughter

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver B. Lerch of 3725 S street northwest, announce the birth of their second child, a daughter, Christie Ann Lerch, in Washington on January 25. Their first born is a boy, Oliver B. Lerch.

Mrs. Lerch is the former Janet Alling Hall, daughter of Mrs. Henry C. Hall of the Kennedy-Warren Apartments and the late Henry C. Hall, who served as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission for 14 years ending in 1928.

Mrs. Webster Leaves For Home in Florida

Mrs. Warren Webster, sr., and her daughter, Mrs. J. Spencer Lucas, who have been spending the early season at the Shoreham, both will leave tomorrow for Mrs. Webster's winter home at Pass-a-Grill, Fla., where they will be for the remainder of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Webster, jr., of Haddonfield, N. J., who come to Washington to see them before their departure, left yesterday to return to their home.

Mme. d'Aulby Concert Changed to Friday

The concert to be given by Mme. Malda Fani d'Aulby at the Washington Club will take place on Friday evening instead of this evening, as was announced yesterday on this page.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE CURRENT epidemic of flu or grippe with every other person seemingly dropping by the wayside, is driving hostesses crazy. We attended a dinner the other night where there were six men and two women, all the others having succumbed to colds at the last moment. No sooner does a hostess get a list all ready, and the seating plan arranged, than somebody calls up and with much sniffling and coughing says that he or she just can't make it. Fortunately the men seem stronger this season than the women. The latter can usually be replaced at the last moment, and even if they aren't, the able-bodied women present find that having at least three men hanging on every word they say gives one a very agreeable "femme fatale" feeling. But just try and fill a man's place on a Saturday evening—it can't be done!

DUDLEY HARMON

MR. AND MRS. CORCORAN THOM, SR., have changed their original plans to go to Mexico in favor of a trip to St. Sauveur, Canada for the winter sports. They will be in the party which Cuthbert Train is organizing. He will leave the end of the week and will take in the ski races at St. Jovite before going on to St. Sauveur. Robert Agnew, of New York, a brother of Donald Agnew, who used to live here, will be a member of the party, as will Laura Tuckerman. Several other lads from New York will also be along.

THOUGH the Republican National Committee is not buying the Hoover house after all, it is expanding to the tune of adding another floor above their headquarters on the top story of a building on Jackson place. As one ardent worker for the cause puts it, "We are expanding, not toward Hoover, but toward Heaven."

PARTY NOTES: Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson will be hosts at dinner on Friday, later taking their guests on to see Leon Pearson's play. "Washington Merry-Go-Round" at the Civic Theater.

Max Gordon, the famous New York producer who put on "The Women" and other hits, is coming down to give the play the once-over, as what he has heard has definitely interested him in it. He will dine with the Pearsons on Friday . . . The former Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik, who have been giving a series of small cocktail parties, will entertain informally next Tuesday afternoon. Their very pretty daughter, Mrs. Jean de Sibour, will model when a showing of clothes for which Mme. Prochnik is Washington representative is held tomorrow and Thursday at the Grafton Hotel.

FELLOW Smith College Alumnae of Mrs. John Guider had the opportunity of seeing some of the famous collection of first editions, letters and manuscript of her father, Frank Hogan, the other afternoon. More even than these cherished possessions Mr. Hogan loves the stories which go with them, and which he told to his guests before they made the tour of his glass cases. Mr. Hogan's collection of Shakespeariana is noted as the finest outside the Folger Library, but that afternoon he showed equally interesting souvenirs of the lives of the British romantic poets. There were the letter Lord Byron wrote to the Archbishop of Canterbury requesting a marriage license; a will he made; the original draft of "Auld Lang Syne," written by Robert Burns in a letter to a Mrs. Dunlop, of Edinborough, who took a great interest in his career; the first letter which Keats wrote to Fanny Brawne after he learned he had contracted the tuberculosis from which he died not long after, and many other fascinating first editions and mementos. All these valuable objects Mr. Hogan keeps not locked up in a vault, but in the library of his home on Sheridan Circle.

Mrs. Joachim Honors Mother at Luncheon

Mrs. Phillip N. Joachim was hostess at a luncheon in the Louis Seize room at the Shoreham Hotel yesterday for her mother, Mrs. Percy Montague, jr., of Scarsdale, N. Y., who is visiting her.

Among guests were Mrs. George H. McHenry, Mrs. Carl A. Joerissen, Mrs. Albert Evans, Mrs. James A. Hoyt and Mrs. Lester N. Medaris.

Dr. Simpson Honors Baron

The Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, was ranking guest at a dinner given last evening by Dr. Kemper Simpson in honor of Baron Gabor Bessenyey, of New York. Later, Dr. Simpson and his guests attended the Civic Theater's production of Leon Pearson's play, "Washington Merry-Go-Round."

Others at the dinner included Countess Cassini and her sons, Igor and Oleg Cassini, Miss Peggy Townsend, Mrs. Drew Pearson, Mrs. W. D. Thomas and Willis Ballinger.

Miss Charlotte Noland, headmistress of Foxcroft School, also entertained at dinner before the play. Her party took place at the Wardman Park Hotel. The play was given in the theater of that hotel.

Mrs. Whittall To Give Dinner for Boston Guests

Mr. and Mrs. William Dana Orcutt, of Boston, who are visiting Mrs. Matthew John Whittall at the Shoreham Hotel, will be guests of honor at a dinner which Mrs. Whittall will give this evening in the blue room of the hotel.

Mrs. Whittall made her home in Boston before moving to Washington a few years ago. She also entertained last evening at dinner in honor of the visitors.

Mrs. Cousins Gives Dinner for O'Connors

Mr. and Mrs. George E. O'Connor, of Waterford, Conn., who spent the week-end at the Mayflower, were guests last night at dinner at the Shoreham of Mrs. Ralph Pittman Cousins, Mr. O'Connor's sister.

Mrs. O'Connor left last night for Palm Beach and Miami for a fortnight's visit.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Pierre Benech left Sunday for a trip of several weeks in Mexico and Central America.

Miss Ruth Hitchcock, daughter of former Senator Gilbert N. Hitchcock, who was at the Shoreham over the week-end, left yesterday to return to New York, where she now makes her home.

Dr. Henry B. Gwynn, of Washington, who has been the guest of his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Turnere, of St. James, Long Island, at their cottage in Cat Cay, Bahamas, B. W. I., recently boarded the Pan American Clipper for Nassau, Bahamas, where he will visit for time before returning to Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Harland Crowell, of Sandy Spring, Md., were among recent arrivals at the Waldorf-Astoria, where they will be for a brief stay.

Capt. E. G. Allen, U. S. A., of Washington, is a guest at the Venetian Hotel while in Miami, Fla.

Miss Noel Anne Loftus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel A. Loftus, of Woodley Park Towers, Washington, was among a party of 100 students from Bradford Junior College, Bradford, Mass., who were guests the past week-end at the Eastern Slope Inn at North Conway, N. H.

Mrs. Barton at Home At Apartment Today

Mrs. Bruce Barton, wife of Representative Barton, of New York, will be at home this afternoon in her apartment at the Shoreham Hotel.

As she will leave tomorrow for Arizona, this will be her only at-home this month.

Mrs. Edwin B. Abbott Visiting Her Parents

Mrs. Edwin Ball Abbott, the former Miss Jean Marian Miller, have arrived from her home in Atlanta, Ga., to visit her parents, Justice and Mrs. Justin Miller.

Mrs. Abbott will be here until the latter part of the month and a number of parties are being planned in her honor.

Engagement Announced

Charles J. Wilson, of Hyattsville, Md., announces the engagement of his daughter, Miss Edith Estelle Wilson, to George William Knepley, son of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Knepley, of Altoona, Pa. The wedding will take place in the fall.

Mrs. Holdrege Gives Tea for Miss Henning

Miss Phyllis Rand And Many Capital Debutantes Attend

Miss Barbara Henning, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Henning, was guest of honor yesterday at an informal tea given by Mrs. Carlton Holdrege.

In the company were a number of debutantes of the season, including Miss Peggy Townsend, Miss Nancy Hoskinson, Miss Elise Hill, Miss Betty Meyers, Miss Betty Fischer, Miss Margaret Jeschke, Miss Lalla Harrison, Miss Aileen Wrightson and Miss Margaret Weems.

Still others at the party were Miss Henning's house guest, Miss Phyllis Rand, of Salmon, Idaho; Miss Edith Pearson, Miss Austine McDonnell, Sidney Kent, Clem Conger, Igor and Oleg Cassini, William and John Gwynne, Basil Cooper, Brandon Shea, Frank and William Sterret, Maj. Horace Smith, Douglas Rollow, Donald Downs, Capt. Robert Williams and George Barnes.

Miss Henning will entertain at luncheon tomorrow in honor of Miss Rand. Guests will be Miss Margaret Jeschke, Miss Betty Lloyd Hutchison, Miss Margaret Weems, Miss Alice Cowing and Miss Aileen Wrightson.

Hatches Entertain Navy Group at Dinner, Theater

Guests were Capt. George S. Bryan, U. S. N., and Mrs. Bryan, Commander and Mrs. Robert P. Melton, Col. and Mrs. William Wattles, Commander and Mrs. Robert D. Kirkpatrick and Commander and Mrs. Frederick G. Richards.

Commander and Mrs. Hatch and their guests attended the Civic Theater at the hotel following the dinner.

Notables to Attend Night Club Opening

Motion picture celebrities and other notables from out of town will add a special note of glamor to the formal opening of the "Pirates Den," Capt. Don Dickerman's night club at 3135 K street.

Errol Flynn, noted film star, and his wife, Lili Damita, the actress, who are visiting Mrs. John Hay Whitney at her Virginia estate, will be Mrs. Whitney's guests at the opening, and there will be other notables in her party of eight.

Mr. Flynn and Capt. Dickerman are old friends, having become acquainted in the days when the latter's night club flourished in New York.

200 Guests Attend Ducey at Home In Navy Yard

Over 200 guests, including a large percentage of Naval officers and their wives, attended the at home given yesterday afternoon by Capt. David F. Ducey, U. S. N., and Mrs. Ducey at their quarters in the Navy Yard.

The house was profusely decorated with spring flowers, and a large bouquet of them centered the tea table. Mrs. Ducey was gowned in lavender crepe, fashioned floor length with a short jacket of purple velvet to which was pinned a corsage of gardenias. She was assisted in receiving by her daughters, Mrs. J. S. Fletcher, who wore a yellow tulle gown with a cream brocade jacket, and Miss Jane Ducey, who was in a smart taffeta print. Both daughters wore gardenia corsages.

Assisting during the afternoon were Miss Barbara McMaster, Miss Betty Bennett, Miss Carolyn Chantry, Miss Bliss Schumann, Mrs. C. R. Peden, Miss Betty Carney, Miss Betty Martyn, Miss Nancy Clark and Miss Virginia Clark.

Among the guests were Rear Admiral and Mrs. George T. Pettengill, Rear Admiral and Mrs. William R. Furlong, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Joseph R. Defrees, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Andrew C. Pickens, and Col. and Mrs. Richard H. McMaster.

Society Sees Play Opening At National

One Silk Hat Noted Among Carriage Trade At 'Of Mice and Men'

Washington society took time off last evening to attend the opening at the National of John Steinbeck's play, "Of Mice and Men." A fair-sized quota of the carriage trade, including one gentleman wearing a high silk hat, took over the first ten rows in the orchestra for Steinbeck's grimey saga of life on a ranch.

Glimpsed here and there—during intermissions—arriving just as the orchestra struck up before the opening scene—clapping for more curtain calls—were Mrs. William O. Douglas, in a black velvet coat over a powder blue frock; Mrs. Thurman Arnold in black satin and an ermine cape; Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., who wore a wine-colored gown topped off with mink. Also there was Mrs. Cary T. Grayson who arrived with a large party, and the Misses Ida and Pauletta Guffey, who frequently are seen at Theater Guild productions. Both were gowned in black and wore coats of Persian lamb.

Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin was seen chatting with friends in the lobby between acts. Others in the throng centering little groups to talk over the play after the first act were Mrs. Esther Bissett Norment, Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Maj. Horace Smith and Miss Patricia Griffin, in a party of four.

Commander and Mrs. Atherton Macondray, inveterate first-nighters, were also in the audience. Baron Paul Schell was seen making his way back to his seat near the front between the second and third acts, and the Minister of Albania, Faik Konitza, was still another from the diplomatic corps who put in an appearance.

Still others there were Dr. and Mrs. George F. Bowerman, Miss Mary B. Adams, Dr. and Mrs. Edgar P. Copeland, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. G. M. Barnes, Miss Bess Davis Schreiner, Col. and Mrs. Robert Fletcher, Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Baldwin and Mrs. Karl W. Corby.

Mrs. Morgenthau, Mrs. Wallace at Home Tomorrow

Tomorrow will be another "Cabinet Day" with two "at homes" on the schedule.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, will receive from 4 to 6 p. m. at their residence, 2211 Thirtieth street northwest. Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, will be at home at their apartment at the Shoreham Hotel.

Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, has postponed her next at home to February 15. The Woodrings recently have moved to the Shoreham.

Rep. and Mrs. Izac Entertain Monday

Representative and Mrs. Ed. V. Izac, of California, will entertain at a reception at the Congressional Club on Monday afternoon, February 13.

Assisting the hostess will be Mrs. William B. Bankhead, Mrs. Sheridan Downey and her two daughters, the Misses Jane and Margaret Downey; Mrs. Clarence Lea, Mrs. Sam McReynolds, Mrs. Harry Lane Englebright, Mrs. Thomas Ford, Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Mrs. Tully Shelley, Mrs. Adrian Kerr and Miss Cabell Izac, daughter of the host and hostess.

Newspaper Women Fete New Senators' Wives

Mrs. Garner in Receiving Line as 13 Recently Joining Official Circle Are Guests at Luncheon

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Wives of new Senators were guests of honor yesterday at a tea given by the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington at its headquarters in the Admiral, 1640 Rhode Island avenue. Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris, president of the club, headed the receiving line with Mrs. John Nance Garner, wife of the Vice President.

The guests were received and served in the dining room of the club where the table was decorated with a bouquet of mimosa and pink gladioli and lighted with white candles.

Wives of new members of the Senate for whom the affair was given were Mrs. W. Warren Barbour, of New Jersey; Mrs. D. Worth Clark, of Idaho; Mrs. Robert A. Taft, of Ohio; Mrs. John A. Danaher, of Connecticut; Mrs. Sheridan Downey, of California; Mrs. Schan Gurney, of South Dakota; Mrs. Rufus Holman, of Oregon; Mrs. Alexander Wiley, of Wisconsin; Mrs. Charles W. Tobey, of New Hampshire; Mrs. Tom Steward, of Tennessee; Mrs. James M. Mead, of New York; Mrs. Clyde M. Reed, of Kansas, and Mrs. Scott W. Lucas, of Illinois.

Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. William B. Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House; Mrs. Alben Barkley, Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, Mrs. Key Pittman, Mrs. Edward R. Burke, recently elected president of the Congressional Club; the former president, Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, and associate members of the Newspaper Women's Club, including Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, Mrs. William N. Doak, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. Gilbert M. Hitchcock, Mrs. Charles M. Lea and Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose.

Mrs. Harris had as her guests Mrs. Hendrick Shipstead, Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, Mrs. Vincent B. Miles and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark.

Senator Hattie Caraway and the wives of other members of the Arkansas delegation in Congress, Mrs. Wade E. Kitchens, Mrs. W. F. Norrell, Mrs. Clye Ellis and Mrs. Wilbur Mills, were guests of Louise Hartley Wassell.

Mrs. Henry Wheeler, wife of the mayor of Newport, R. I.; Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, Mrs. A. B. Willaume, of Narragansett Pier, R. I., and Mrs. Wheeler's mother, Mrs. William J. Congressional Unit Entertains

Members of the executive board of the Congressional Club entertained the new committee chairmen and the women of the press yesterday morning at a breakfast in the clubhouse on New Hampshire avenue.

Guests were welcomed by Mrs. Edward R. Burke, wife of Senator Burke, of Nebraska, the new club president, and other new officers. Carnations in tones of rose and red decorated the rooms on the first floor, where an informal reception was held preceding the breakfast. The buffet table from which breakfast was served in the ballroom on the second floor was appointed with a centerpiece of pink snapdragons. The menu included fruit juice, creamed beef on biscuits, muffins with jam and marmalade and doughnuts.

Each of the newspaper women was assigned to one of the Congressional hostesses and tables for four were arranged before the open fireplace where a cheery fire burned.

New officers, in addition to Mrs. Burke, are Mrs. Clarence Hancock, of New York, first vice president; Mrs. Robert Doughton, of North Carolina, second vice president; Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, of Minnesota, third vice president; Mrs. Ewing Thomason, of Texas, fourth vice president; Mrs. Richard Welch, of California, fifth vice president; Mrs. John R. Murdock, of Arizona, recording secretary; Mrs. Robert Rich, of Pennsylvania, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Clyde Smith, of Maine, treasurer.

New committee chairmen who were guests included: Membership, Mrs. Herron Pearson, Tennessee; entertainment, Mrs. Charles F. McLaughlin, Nebraska; house, Mrs. Scott W. Lucas, Illinois; finance, Mrs. Carl E. Mapes, Michigan; press, Mrs. Edward C. Moran, jr., Maine; printing, Mrs. Elmer O. Leatherwood, Utah; book, Mrs. Thomas F. Ford, California.

Wiley Says Vote In Wisconsin Was For 'Center Path'

Senator Alexander Wiley, of Wisconsin, yesterday afternoon addressed the League of Republican Women at its February meeting in the Mayflower Hotel, speaking on "What Happened in Wisconsin."

"It was not a fight between personalities," said the new Senator from the Badger State, referring to the campaign in which he was elected. "It was between systems. We asked the people of Wisconsin to think straight; to see where they were going. The question was and is whether we are going to the right, or to the left, or down the center path of the American way.

"Real values have to be recaptured—honesty, integrity, industry, love of our brothers. We must get down to fundamentals. It was illustrated on the Wisconsin front that we need to rediscover these values."

Senator Wiley made a plea for individual responsibility for clear thinking and constructive leadership.

Mrs. Edward E. Gann, president of the league, presided and the speaker was introduced by Mrs. James Wentz.

Paris Subject Of Club Talk

Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, speaking on "Recent News From Foreign Lands" before members and guests at the weekly luncheon of the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday, shied away from politics, and stressed "very little things" as indicative of conditions existing in countries she visited last year.

She compared the Paris of 40 and 20 years ago with the Paris of today, the light-hearted gaiety of past years with the feeling of tension now. "Everywhere," she said, "there are signs of preparedness. The people lived through just as much horror during those fateful days last September as if war had really started. They are worried, anxious, unhappy. The plain working people were indignant that strikes had been forced upon them when all they wanted was security. Yet with it all, there is a strange calm in France, a dull, waiting sort of calm."

According to Mrs. Lewis, Italy presents an entirely different picture. There the people impressed her as being up in the world even though living a strict life without luxuries or comforts. "Everyone," she stated, "is devoted to Mussolini, and is a little bit heady about getting back Italy's colonies. Food is restricted, menus are not so large, but all the people seem willing to go along with the hope of eventually spreading out. There is no spending, the women are not well dressed."

Among the guests at the speaker's table with Mrs. Lewis and the club president, Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard, were Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, former president; Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. Henry L. Roosevelt, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Mrs. Warren R. Austin, and Miss Lydia Loring.

Among the many others who attended were Mrs. L. D. Hawkins, and her guests, Mrs. J. W. Buchanan, Mrs. Edward Pou, Mrs. Thomas Wadden, and Mrs. Max Gardner; Mrs. Garland Ferguson, Mrs. Frank Buck, Mrs. David TuckerBrown, Mrs. Samuel Herrick and her guests, Miss Eleanor Colburn, Mrs. James G. Field, Mrs. J. R. Walsh, jr., Mrs. Newton Jeffress and Miss Marjorie Brockett; Mrs. Tilman B. Parks, Mrs. Julien Friant, Mrs. Paul Lineburger and guests, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. Walter Crane, Mrs. J. J. Mack, Mrs. William Burdick, Mrs. Edward Stitt, Miss Helen Newton and Mrs. Cook; Mrs. Huston Thompson, Mrs. Mark Bristol, the Misses Pauletta and Ida Guffey and Mrs. Charles Brand.

Mrs. W. D. Leahy And Mrs. Land to Fete Navy Sponsors

The Society of Sponsors of the U. S. Navy will continue its plan of awarding a scholarship each year to the son of a deceased Naval officer, to prepare him for the Naval Academy, it was decided yesterday at the first meeting of the board of trustees at its convention headquarters in the Mayflower Hotel.

David Cummins, jr., son of the late Lieut. Comdr. David Cummins, who was lost on the blimp which went to the aid of the Akron, is the student holding it this year. The award is solely on the basis of scholarship.

The sponsors yesterday were received at the White House and today, following their annual meeting at the Mayflower, will be guests of Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of the chief of Naval Operations, at tea, and of Mrs. Emory S. Land, wife of Rear Admiral Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, at a buffet supper.

Two members here for the meeting are Mrs. Arthur T. Sutcliffe, of New York, great granddaughter of Robert Fulton, who sponsored in 1912 the fourth ship named for him, and Mrs. Edward Palmer, of Ventnor, N. J., a great granddaughter of Francis Scott. Mrs. Palmer sponsored the S-9.

D. C. Pen Women Celebrate Past Presidents' Night

Ritualistic Ceremony and Impressive Memorial Service Held Following Monthly Dinner; History Is Reviewed

A ritualistic ceremony, written in poetry by Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, president of the District of Columbia Branch of the National League of American Pen Women, and Miss Nattie Richards Tyler, studio chairman, was presented last night at the first observance of past presidents' night by the members of the branch. The program followed the monthly "family night" dinner given at the Grafton Hotel.

Mrs. Thora Seaton, chairman of music, played the presidential processional. Mrs. Tyler opened the ceremony with a symbolical prologue and there followed introductory verses, preceding the addresses of the past presidents. At the close of the talks, Mrs. Tyler instructed Richardo Tyler, who, as a page was presiding at the altar, to light a candle in honor of each of the eleven living past presidents, who were in turn presented with crimson roses.

On the improvised altar was an heirloom altar cloth, more than 100 years old. It was of cream, silk, elaborately embroidered in white roses, and the candelabra holding the eleven lighted candles was of antique brass.

An impressive memorial service paid tribute to the past presidents who are no longer living—Mrs. Harriet H. Locher, Mrs. Elsie Mulliken, and Mrs. Anita Maris Boggs. As the name of each was read, a white rose was placed on the altar in a crystal bowl filled with asparagus fern.

The presidential recessional followed this service. Later the past presidents returned to the studio and held an informal reception.

Mrs. Theodore Tiller, who was the first president, serving from 1920 to 1922, recalled the history of the Washington Branch. The National League of American Pen Women was formed here in 1897 but it was not until 1920 that a national convention was called and a local branch formed. The national and District groups shared a clubhouse at 1722 H street. A cafe, known as "The Hoot of the Owl," was in the basement and it was there the first book review luncheons were held.

Mrs. Tiller recalled the Sunday teas of which Mrs. Amos A. Fries was chairman when Premier Briand, of France; H. G. Wells, Gen. John J. Pershing, Mary Roberts Rhinehart, Kathleen Norris and many other distinguished persons were entertained as guests of honor. Other interesting milestones in the progress of the branch were reviewed in the history.

Other past presidents honored were Isabelle Geddes Smith, Mrs. Agnes Giles Newman, Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, Mrs. Estelle M. Moses, Dr. Jean Stephenson, Mrs. Azalea Green Badgely, Dr. Frances Moon Butts, during whose administration the studio was moved from the Stoneleigh Court Apartments, where it had been maintained, to the Burlington Hotel; Mrs. Bess Heath Olmstead, in whose presidency the studio was moved to its present location in the Grafton Hotel, and Miss Marguerite Merigold.

CLUB WOMEN of Washington, always ready to join in a project for the benefit of the community, are doing their bit in preparation for St. Valentine's Day parties to swell the fund for a permanent blood and serum "bank" at Children's Hospital.

Some are having small bridge parties at their homes, in several instances just one table, while other individual hostesses are planning larger parties or entire organizations are sponsoring affairs at their headquarters to aid the "bank." Not all of them are being given on St. Valentine's Day. Some are being arranged at other times during the week but the hearts, at $1 each, which are the tickets and represent that amount added to the fund, will be the central theme at all the parties.

Some of the club groups will play bridge, others Chinese checkers, which are having a vogue because they are "so easy to play," and some are even planning games of hearts as appropriate to the St. Valentine's season.

Every cent of the money, with no deduction for expenses, will go to the "bank," which will be established to provide blood for transfusions.

The tickets may be obtained at the counter of The Post, 1337 E street, and requests by mail accompanied by money order, check or cash, will be filled at once.

THE UNITED STATES is 30 years behind England in its social legislation, Dr. Dorothy Sells, of Brookings Institution, pointed out yesterday, conducting the first of a series of classes on current labor problems sponsored by the League of Women Shoppers. A session was held at 2:15 at the Friends Meeting House, and one at 5 in the Arts Club.

Up to the present, legislation has primarily recognized property rights, she said, but now the trend, with the social security act and wages and hours law, implies an individual's right to a job and the responsibility of the state to guarantee a minimum wage to the worker.

THE RECENT Conference on the Cause and Cure of War will be discussed at a meeting being sponsored by the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters under the Department of Government and Foreign Policy tonight at Friends Meeting House. Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, the chairman, will preside.

DR. ALICE CHENEY, of the staff of the International Labor Office, who was to have spoken before the local A. A. U. W. February 18, has canceled her trip to the United States and will go instead to the Balkans.

4 More Parties Announced for Serum 'Bank'

Metropolitan, Army And Navy, University Clubs Complete Plans

Completed plans for card parties to be held at the Metropolitan Club, Army and Navy Club, University Club and the Community House at Colonial Village, Va., in conjunction with other similar affairs throughout the city during St. Valentine's Day week, for the benefit of a permanent blood and serum "bank" at Children's Hospital were announced yesterday.

The Metropolitan Club party will be on the evening of February 9, a special dinner being served before play begins at 9 p. m. for members of the club, their wives and guests.

Nine Tables of Duplicate

Both rubber and duplicate bridge will be played, with nine tables of the latter planned. Partners for the duplicate will be supplied and the play will be under the direction of Lieut. Comdr. William A. Corley, who is donating his services for the occasion.

Arrangements have been made to give over the entire cardroom to the party, with overflow tables accommodated in other rooms throughout the club.

The Army and Navy Club party also will take place on the evening of February 9, according to an announcement made by Lieut. Comdr. John DuBose, chairman of the card committee, with dinner and music before the duplicate and rubber bridge that has been planned for members, their wives and guests. Play will start at 8:30 p. m.

Dutch Treat Dinner

Lieut. Comdr. Corley, in charge of arrangements for the party at the University Club on Sunday evening, February 12, announced that a Dutch treat dinner would be served in the club dining room for members and their guests at 7 p. m., play beginning at 8:30 p. m. with tables for duplicate and rubber bridge.

P. E. Henninger announced plans completed for a party to be held Monday evening, February 13, at 8:15 o'clock under the auspices of the Colonial Village (Va.) Civic Association. Tables for duplicate and rubber bridge play will be set up in the ballroom of the Colonial Village Community House.

With Henninger as chairman, the committee in charge includes Mrs. R. N. Blake, Mrs. J. W. Dorsey, Mrs. Bernard Jay, Mrs. J. P. Scott, Mrs. C. W. Watts, J. B. Lowell, J. T. Onley and Lewis Tubbs.

Private Parties in Homes

In addition to these and other large parties in clubs, hotels and community halls and houses, citizens of Washington and the nearby vicinity are holding smaller parties in private homes.

A table of only four—with each player contributing one dollar to the establishment of the Children's Hospital blood and serum bank—may mean the difference between life and death to some child during the coming year. Every cent realized as a result of these city-wide card and game parties during St. Valentine's Day week will go for this purpose.

The parties, large and small, are under the sponsorship of Station WJSV and The Washington Post. Tickets may be obtained at the counter on the first floor of The Post Building. Mail requests, with check or money order made out to "Children's Hospital 'Bank' Fund," will be filled immediately. Tickets are red, cardboard hearts, with space for each player's name.

Have a heart! Take a hand! Make plans today for a party, large or small, in your own home on or near St. Valentine's Day.

D. C. Heads Ask More Authority Over Street Lights

The District Commissioners yesterday asked Congress for authority to control the hours of operating the city's street lighting system.

The act of 1916 leaves them no discretion, the Commissioners said, requiring that the street lights be turned on 20 minutes after sunset and turned off 40 minutes before sunrise.

Corporation Counsel Seal said the District heads wish to provide continual lights on certain streets and to turn on lights 15 minutes earlier in winter and 15 minutes later in summer.

rather than appointment by the President.

That such a move will have support on the District Committee is certain as Chairman Randolph is sponsor for the local suffrage resolution now before Congress.

Acting Budget Director F. J. Bailey declined to comment yesterday on a published report that the Griffenhagen recommendations had the conditional approval of his office.

It was recalled, however, that the budget director in the past has indicated willingness to drop his supervision of the District budget whenever the Federal payment is withdrawn or so definitely fixed that it may not be raised or lowered by District authorities.

Griffenhagen, moreover, is known to have conferred with the budget bureau before making the recommendation that the Federal payment be stabilized.

District welfare officials, roundly criticized in the Lewis report, hailed welfare recommendations of the Griffenhagen report.

Frederick W. McReynolds, welfare board chairman, said the plan was "much superior" to that of the Lewis report, which, he said, was "complicated, elaborate and unnecessarily expensive."

Elwood Street, director of public welfare, said he was glad to note the Griffenhagen report had recognized value of services performed by the Board of Public Welfare.

Officials explained the Griffenhagen recommendations offered an organization which in practice would not differ greatly from the present welfare setup.

Bill Would Protect Eagle From Hunters

A bill introduced yesterday by Representative Clason (Republican), of Massachusetts, would provide for a fine of $500 and six months imprisonment for anyone convicted of hunting or trapping the bald eagle, the national emblem since 1782.

Cab Driver-Mother Ill and Destitute

Mrs. Lillian Botkin, of 1445 N street northwest, 96-pound cab driver and mother of two boys, is unable because of her health to drive her 1933 taxi, for which the last $5 went to keep it from confiscation. Today she will take a letter to the White House requesting that her husband, an unemployed printer from whom she is separated, be given a job in the Government Printing Office.

Chavez Kin Tells Of Pay 'Quotas' On $100 Workers

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Feb. 6 (AP).—A Federal Court jury in the trial of 25 defendants charged with political manipulation of the WPA heard the defense today in a series of blanket denials of wrong-doing.

Stanley W. P. Miller, dismissed assistant United States district attorney, son-in-law of United States Senator Chavez, admitted creating political machines to elect candidates favorable to the Senator but denied coercion of WPA workers or supervisors.

Concerning a meeting at Miller's house, he was asked if fund quotas against WPA wages were discussed. "I remember something about somebody saying how much some one should contribute if he was making $100 a month," Miller answered.

Mother's Standby in Treating

CHILDREN'S Frequent COLDS

If your children keep coming down with nasty little colds all winter, use Vicks VapoRub these 3 simple ways.

✓ For relieving discomforts of chest colds and night cough, rub VapoRub on throat, chest and back at bedtime. VapoRub's poultice-vapor action relieves local congestion—eases muscular soreness or tightness—helps the youngster relax into restful sleep.

✓ For coughing and irritated throat caused by colds, put VapoRub on the child's tongue. It melts, trickles slowly down—bathes the throat with soothing medication. Then massage VapoRub on throat and chest.

✓ For "sniffles" and misery of head colds, melt a spoonful of VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water. Have the child breathe in the steaming vapors. This loosens phlegm, clears air-passages, makes breathing easier. Also massage VapoRub on throat and chest. Millions of families use these three time-tested ways to relieve the misery of colds.

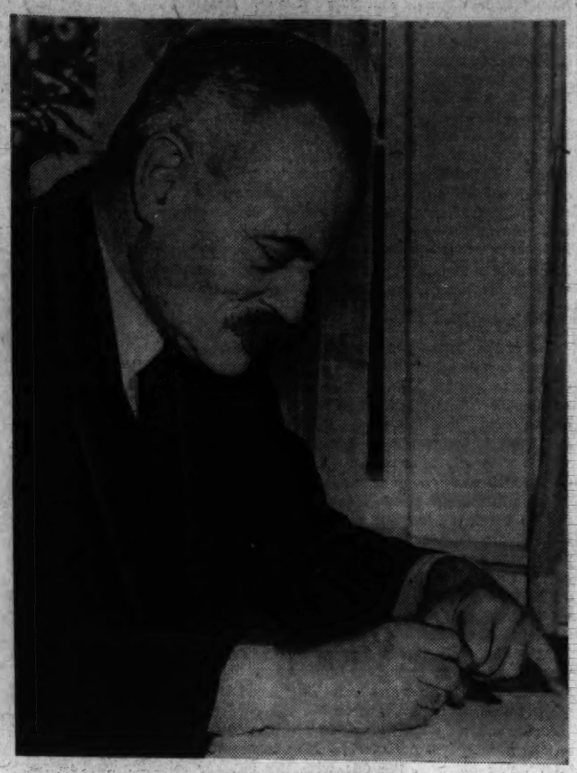
Life Begins at 70 - - - - -

Retired Engineering Professor Writes Children's Books at 82



HECTOR FEZANDIE

Hector Fezandie, Native of France, Finds New Career Profitable and So Interesting He Intends to Continue It

By Gerald G. Gross.

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are—Editor's note.)

Some people, when they step down from active duty and retire, spend their new-found spare time caring for homes and gardens. Others start crusading for "ham-and-egg" plans, or their equivalent. Many spend the rest of their lives traveling, writing memoirs or just loafing.

Hector Fezandie is different. At the age of 82 he is enjoying immensely a reincarnation as an author of children's books.

A mechanical engineer by profession and professor emeritus of the Stevens Institute of Technology since his rtirement in 1930, Mr. Fezandie has put aside thoughts of leverage, stress and strain to devote himself almost exclusively to concocting tales that will amuse youngsters from 3 to 13.

That he is succeeding can be indicated in no better way than by pointing out that the three books he has published in the last three years are selling well. They are "Felicia and the Sandman," his first venture as a juvenile writer; "Land of Lost Dolls" and "Knight of the Third Estate."

The latter, it should be explained, is a romantic novel with a French revolution setting and marks the author's only departure from his literary specialty, though it was written to appeal to adolescents as well as adults. The two books he is now preparing for publication are both intended for youngsters.

Born in France, Came to U. S. in 1861

Mr. Fezandie, who sports one of the most impressive handlebar mustaches seen on the streets of Washington since the heyday of the late Police Inspector Albert Headley, was born in France of Huguenot stock on August 22 1856. Though he came to the United States at the age of 5, his interest in the land of his birth never waned and was directly responsible for his decision to join company with the many authors who have sunk their imaginative pens deep into the French revolution.

He began teaching even before his graduation from Stevens Institute, and after receiving his master's degree from Columbia, became a pedagogue in dead earnest. Well, almost in dead earnest. For, while he found the teaching of engineering a busy, interesting career, Mr. Fezandie never quite succeeded in making his love for writing take second place.

Maybe he didn't try very hard. At at any rate, he is now having the time of his life thinking up stories for and about little children. His six grandchildren were his original inspirations, but they are growing up so fast that bonpapa, as they call him, is beginning to wonder if he must await the coming of great-grandchildren to obtain fresh incentive.

The heroine of "Felicia and the Sandman" was graduated only last week from Powell Junior High School. She is Felicia Miller, of 2918 Eighteenth street northwest. Her mother, Mrs. James A. Miller, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fezandie. Attending Felicia's graduation exercises made her grandfather feel quite old.

Mrs. Fezandie Prefers to Travel

"I wrote 'Felicia and the Sandman' in nine days, which was very fast for me," he said.

He and his wife celebrated their fifty-second wedding anniversary last summer. They are spending the winter with the Millers, at least until Mrs. Fezandie is bitten again by the travel bug.

"She likes to tour about and see the sights," he husband said with a laugh. "Myself, I enjoy people more than sightseeing."

Perhaps there will be another Fezandie writing children's books 40 or 50 years hence. Bonpapa's only son is following in his father's footsteps, so far, by teaching at the Stevens Institute. If he doesn't slide off on some tangent he, too, will be fashioning literary tidbits for boys and girls along about the year 1980.

March 1 Deadline Set for Forming New Taxi Groups

The District Public Utilities Commission yesterday fixed March 1 as the deadline for formation of new taxicab associations.

This decision, announced after a meeting in which one new association, the Town Taxi, was approved, restores the ruling in effect through June last year, officials said. At that time the liability insurance law for cabs went into effect and the ruling against new associations was lifted temporarily.

Hearings on taxi rate and zone changes will be started tomorrow. Two groups have asked increases in rates and reduction of the zone areas.

Stallion Walks 35 Miles To Home of Colthood

A 3-year-old bay stallion, missing from its stable since Friday night, yesterday turned up at the Poolesville (Md.) farm on which he was raised—35 miles away.

Boo's Card, belonging to Walter Shepard, son of J. B. Shepard, Somerset Heights, Md., disappeared Friday.

Bandit Fells Victim With Pick, Gets $12

Louis Caplan, 61, proprietor of a junk shop at 922 M street southeast, was struck over the head with a pick wielded by a colored man yesterday and robber of $12. He was treated at Providence Hospital.

Takoma Park Man Dies

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 6 (AP).—John Kennedy, of Takoma Park, Md., died today, the second victim of an automobile accident at New Castle on Sunday.

Legislative Body Urged For Capital

Suffrage Group's Committee Asks All Civic Units To Push Proposal

Immediate provision by Congress of a District legislative body to be elected by the people was demanded last night by the District of Columbia Suffrage Association's executive committee, at a meeting called to study the Griffenhagen report.

Letters will be sent today to 600 District civic organizations advising that as the elective side of the report seems most important, civic groups should demand suffrage now while the public is keyed to high interest.

The statement signed by Wilbur S. Finch, president of the association, declares: "The executive committee of the District of Columbia Suffrage Association, acting on the authority conferred upon it by the association, suggests to all organizations in the District interested in setting up the ballot box here at the National Capital the necessity of immediate action, calling upon the members of Congress and particularly upon the chairman of the Senate and House District committees to provide us immediately with a municipal legislative body to be elected by the people; and this is the only feature of the report for which consideration now is requested."

The Suffrage Association, composed of officers of other District civic organizations, had previously adopted at a meeting in November a resolution recommending a municipal body elected by qualified voters to take over the duties of the District Commissioners.

Along the Avenues And Alleys

Although the seeing usually teach the blind, 11 women with perfect sight sat around a table at the District Chapter House of the American Red Cross last night, taking lessons from a blind woman.

She was Miss Catherine Grady, a blind volunteer Red Cross worker, and her pupils were learning to make books that the blind can read. Each had a sheet of parchment and held over it a steel frame punched with little holes in groups of six.

As Miss Grady called the numbers of the holes in the frame, her pupils punched the parchment to form little bumps on the other side of the sheet, which are the "letters" that blind reader "see" with their fingers.

With her sensitive fingers Miss Grady brushed lightly the work of her pupils, to see if they had correctly transcribed the A B C that was the subject of the first lesson; while they, unable to feel their mistakes with untrained fingertips, looked carefully at their work and compared it with the book.

Miss Grady will continue her classes every Monday night for 10 weeks.

100,000 Tags Still to Go

William A. Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic, said yesterday 100,000 District motorists have exactly three weeks to get their 1939 tags.

Van Duzer advised automobile owners to "hurry up," since the number of tags so far issued is 7,000 below the figure at the same time last year. The deadline is March 1.

At this time, Van Duzer added, the tags can be obtained without waiting.

Liquid to Cure Baby's Bronchitis, Spills, Burns Her

Medicine intended to cure 2-year-old Jean Weaver, 519 Lebrum street southeast, of bronchitis resulted in painful burns for her last night.

Jean's parents were preparing a liquid fumes from which she was to inhale. The noise in the front room awakened her and she ran into the room and playfully reached for the inhalator. The liquid, containing a strong acid, spilled over her right arm and hand.

Religion, Democracy Must Recapture Imagination of Youth, 800 Young People Told on Christian Endeavor Anniversary

World Leader Speaks Before Celebration At Eastern Church

Civilization faces chaos unless democracy and Christianity recapture the imagination of youth, Dr. Daniel A. Poling warned 800 young people last night at exercises marking the fifty-eighth anniversary of the Christian Endeavor movement.

Held at Eastern Presbyterian Church, sponsored by the District C. E. Union, the meeting was one of scores held throughout America.

"Everywhere youth is on the march at the call of dictators, marching in the bitterness of hate," declared Dr. Poling, president of the World Endeavor Society, "but they are marching because the dictators have captured their imaginations."

Citing the foreign countries whose former Christian Endeavorers have been regimented into dictator-controlled youth movements, the speaker said that "Democracy must once again become vital in our lives, if civilization is to be saved. Boys and girls must once again see Lincoln in his glory and Washington in his might."

"Democracy is more than a torchlight parade, more than a Fourth of July celebration," stated Dr. Poling, pastor of the Baptist Temple, Philadelphia. "It is service, sacrifice and even death, if necessary.

"Back of all of this is Christ's call to youth, and Christ revealed transcends all the attractiveness of dictators," he said, adding that "the opportunity today for Christian Endeavor is without parallel in the history of Christendom."

Dr. Poling was introduced by Frank M. McGeary, president of the District Christian Endeavor Union. The Rev. A. E. Barrows, pastor of the host church, gave a prayer.

Special guests included Miss Helen Lyon and Paul Williams, members of the executive committee of the International Christian Endeavor; also Miss Mary E. Bond and Mrs. Annie B. Gotta, who joined the Calvary Baptist Endeavor Society in 1889.

The Christian Endeavor movement was founded in Portland, Me., in 1881 by Dr. and Mrs. Francis Clarke. Today it embraces 80,000 societies, as well as 100,000 youth groups who have been organized as a result of the movement.

Youth Council Backs 7-Point Health Plan

Stresses Tuberculsois And Social Diseases In Congress Program

The Washington Youth Council last night prepared to urge upon Congress increased health facilities for the District.

A seven-point program which will be submitted at hearings on District appropriations, probably next month, includes provisions for 200 more beds for adult tubercular patients; health centers in the Northwest, Northeast and Southeast sections; pay for public health nurses and training of more colored nurses at Freedmen's Hospital.

In addition, the council, representing more than 10,000 youth in various local organizations, will petition Congress for a law providing better protection for illegitimate children and their mothers, a law requiring pre-marital syphilis tests and a law requiring prenatal blood tests for all pregnant women.

At last night's meeting Assistant Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger outlined present health facilities: "Health centers for the north-central and southwest sections are almost mandatory," he said.

Dr. A. B. Coulter, director of the tuberculosis clinic of the D. C. Health Department, asked that Washington youth "get busy" on tuberculosis.

Dr. Russell Fields, of the venereal disease clinic of Gallinger Hospital, described facilities for coping with social diseases. The Youth Council Monday will begin a course to train young people for social hygiene lecture work among youth and neighborhood groups. Students who complete the course will be certified by the D. C. Social Hygiene Society.

N. Y. Avenue Pastor Addresses Brotherhood

Painting a realistic picture of Scotland, his native land, the Rev. Peter Marshall, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, last night told members of the Men's Brotherhood of the First Baptist Church that students of one Scotch University raised more than 17,000 pounds in one day for hospital support.

Practically all the hospitals in the country are free, he said.

Through Route From Northeast To Northwest D. C. Areas Urged

Kenilworth Citizens Association Asserts Hundreds of Hours Weekly Would Be Saved by Residents

Construction of a new, fast, through route linking the Northeast and Northwest sections of the city was proposed last night by the Kenilworth Citizens Association.

As envisioned by members of the association, the route could be effected by extension of either M street or Eastern avenue. Hundreds of hours a week would thus be saved many residents of the area who, it was pointed out, are now compelled to use a circuitous route by way of Fifteenth and H streets northeast.

In another resolution, the association expressed opposition to any change in taxicab zone rates which would result in increased charges for transportation in downtown Washington. The association at the same time favored expansion of outlying zones.

In a third resolution, the organization opposed further extension of the use of parking meters in any section of the city.

Parking meters, traffic problems and taxi rates also were considered at meetings of eight other citizens associations last night. Reports of other meetings follow:

Forest Hills

Restoration of funds to the District budget to provide additional school teachers was advocated by the Forest Hill Citizens Association meeting in the Ben W. Murch School.

In a resolution introduced by Mrs. Leslie B. Wright, president of the association, the group urged the Senate and House sub-committees on District Appropriations to restore the estimates recommended by the Commissioners.

The association also indorsed the parkometers and went on record in support of increasing taxicab fares "if the Public Utilities Commission believes it would be for the best interest of the industry."

Charles A. Burmeister presented a resolution which won approval, requesting that "in view of recent dreadful accidents, the lights on Connecticut avenue be kept on until sunrise or until it is light enough for motorists to see pedestrians."

President L. A. Carruthers, of the Federation of Citizens Associations, discussed the District tax program and Wilbur LaRoe, jr., chairman of the Parole Board, spoke on penal institutions and the administration of parole here. Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, United States Army, retired, presided.

Takoma Park

Approval of proposed rezoning of the District to increase taxicab rates, provided drivers prove them necessary for profitable operation at the Commissioners' zoning hearing on Wednesday, was voted by the Citizens Association of Takoma Park, D. C.

The resolution was passed after the association's third annual dinner at the Trinity Episcopal Church. Senator Lynn J. Frazier (Republican, of North Dakota, spoke on agricultural problems.

Congress Heights

Petitions for construction of a library and an enlarged postoffice will be circulated through Congress Heights section, it was decided at a meeting of the Congress Heights Citizens' Association.

R. A. Sullivan will serve as chairman of the postoffice committee, while Dr. E. E. Richardson will head the library group.

Manor Park

A special committee was appointed by the Manor Park Citizens Association to study the proposed reorganization of the District government. Henry Seaquist was named chairman.

The group also favored: 50 new police officers for the District force; appropriations for beginning construction of a new Wilson Teachers College building, and an increase of 5 cents in taxi zones Nos. 1 and 2.

Metropolis View

The Metropolis View Citizens Association went on record favoring an extension of parking meters in downtown sections.

The citizens voted to oppose both the Patman chain store tax and recently proposed District sales tax.

Georgetown

Mrs. H. D. Hoffman, director of the Washington Housing Association, urged members of the Georgetown Citizens Association to co-operate with the District Housing Authority in bettering housing conditions in Georgetown.

Members opposed the relicensing of a junk shop in the community, long detrimental to surrounding buildings whose license was revoked, but which has recently applied for a new license.

Bladensburg Road

Resolutions urging adequate appropriations for Gallinger Hospital, a separate civil service commission for the District, and a law prohibiting serving of liquor by women were approved by the Bladensburg Road Citizens Association.

Henry I. Sweeney, of 3011 Channing street northeast, was awarded the $10 prize for best new name suggested for the unit—National Gateway Citizens Association. Runners up, given free one-year memberships, included W. A. Lyons, Carl A. Lundberg, Alton Aaron, and Marion E. Glibert.

Dupont Circle Citizens

Thorough policing of Dupont Circle Park to prevent juvenile vandalism was urged yesterday in a resolution adopted by the Dupont Circle Citizens Association.

Children recently broke the hand from a marble statue supporting the park fountain, Capt. Arthur Miller, of the Third Precinct, principal speaker, was told, and although the park provides ample facilities for a playground, youngsters seem more interested in frequenting the forbidden portions of it. Capt. Miller spoke on "Police Co-operation."

A second resolution adopted demanded refusal by District authorities of a license for the defunct Heigh-Ho Club.

Fairfax Officers Lead FBI to Theft Suspect

Falls Church Policeman Gets Tip Resulting in Fugitive's Arrest

Fairfax County authorities yesterday showed Federal Bureau of Investigation agents where they could find a man they have been hunting for a year.

Acting on a tip furnished Walter Mitchell, Falls Church town policeman, Mayor L. P. Daniel, Falls Church mayor, Fairfax County Sheriff Epps Kirby, and Mitchell led three F. B. I. agents to a shack near River Bend, Va., where they arrested John J. Kirk, 21, of Keyser, W. Va.

Last night Walter V. McLaughlin, FBI agent at Huntington, W. Va., announced to the Associated Press the arrest of Kirk by "FBI agents at Leesburg, Va." McLaughlin said Kirk was wanted in connection with the assault-robbery of Lester Andrews, of Keyser, January 7, 1938. He said Federal charges of violation of the national motor vehicle theft act and State charges of assault with intent to kill, grand larceny and robbery were pending against the prisoner.

Trio Convicted In Killing to Seek Retrial Today

Justice Jesse C. Adkins today will hear argument for a new trial for Leroy Evans and George Malloy, both 19, and James D. Posey, 20 years old, convicted of second-degree murder on charges of slaying George E. Sanford August 13.

Sanford, it was testified at the trial, was a friend of the accused. The four, in an automobile, picked up a colored man, Thomas E. Giles, planning to rob him, according to testimony. Sanford was mortally wounded in a tussle with Giles. The Government accuses Evans of firing the shot which killed him and charges all three defendants were guilty since they were engaged in commission of a crime.

Woman Shot; Brother Held

Mrs. Sarah Budd, 28, of 901 Fourth street southwest, was shot in the right thigh early yesterday at the home of her father, Louis Volk, of the 1200 block of Delaware avenue southwest. Police said her brother, Henry Volk, 20, is being detained.

Mead Warns Of Imported Racial Hatred

N. Y. Senator Speaks At B'nai B'rith Lodge Installation; Celler on Program

America must take steps to prevent importation from Europe of racial bigotry and hatred, Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, told 600 members of the Argo Lodge, No. 413, B'nai B'rith, last night at its annual installation banquet at the Mayflower Hotel. The address was broadcast over Station WOL.

Current events in Europe, said Senator Mead, "involve every citizen throughout the world who subscribes to freedom, equality and tolerance." To preserve liberty in America, he continued, "we must rededicate ourselves to the Bill of Rights and to those basic principles of freedom and justice contained therein and must provide economic security for all."

"One of the basic reasons for the greatness of our country," he said, "is that it has always been a haven of refuge to those who have been forced to flee from religious and political persecution and oppression."

Praises Jewish Spirit

Senator Mead praised the Jewish race for the spirit of peace and sacrifice with which it had met persecution, exemplifying the code of benevolence, brotherly love, and harmony that is the watchword of B'nai B'rith.

Introducing Senator Mead, Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York, spoke of the economic bases of modern anti-democratic philosophies, and declared the Senator had "the courage, the hardihood, the perseverance and the rare wisdom to point to the correct solution."

He paid tribute to B'nai B'rith, which he described as "caring for the needy and wounded in spirit," and "inoculating true Americanism with great intensity all over the country."

Charitable Work Described

Seymour S. Guthman, president of Argo Lodge, and Maurice Bisgyer, executive secretary of B'nai B'rith, spoke of the work of the organization during its 96 years of existence, through the Hillel Foundation among college students, through the A. Z. A. among adolescent youth, through the vocational service bureau and the Anti-Defamation League in combating anti-Semitism, as well as its charitable work in hospitals and orphanages.

Guthman suggested that the vocational service bureau, by spreading Jews among different occupations, should help to remove the economic basis of anti-Semitism; and that the Anti-Defamation League conduct an educational campaign designed to revive Jewish morale and help preserve their cultural integrity. He declared anti-Semitism is in part a "smoke screen created by economic barons," and could therefore be attacked by fighting for social justice.

Officers of Argo Lodge installed at the banquet by Harry Adelberg, president of District Grand Lodge, No. 5, were Seymour S. Guthman, president; Henry Salus, vice president; Gerald I. Oxenburg, warden; Philip Goldstein, guardian; Norman Freedenberg, assistant monitor; Moses Offenberg, financial secretary; David Wiener, recording secretary, and Morris Garfinkle, treasurer. Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld pronounced the invocation, and Rabbi Solomon H. Metz the benediction. Morris Cafritz and Leo Schlosberg were co-chairmen of the dinner.

G. U. FIVE TAKES 40-32 GAME FROM W. VA.

Hoyas Never Lose Large Early Lead

Hilltoppers Slide Into Second Place In Conference as Schmitt Leads Five

By Jack Munhall.

Playing brilliantly occasionally, but sloppily most of the time, Georgetown University last night outshot a band of rough and ready Mountaineers from West Virginia on Tech court to snap its losing streak at four games and take undisputed possession of second place in the Eastern Conference through medium of a 40-32 victory.

The Hoyas' triumph, their third in four starts in the conference, left them half a game behind leading Carnegie Tech and as much ahead of the third-place Pittsburgh Panthers.

Some 750 fans watched the Hoyas bring to an abrupt halt the slump that had drawn threats of a radical shakeup from an irate Coach Ripley and at the same time serve warning that they're ready for tomorrow night's traditional battle with Maryland which will go a long way toward determining the District college champion.

Mountaineers Finish Strong

But there were grave doubts as late as the final five minutes of play that Georgetown would salvage its eighth victory in 13 games this season, for the Mountaineers, after an uncertain start, closed with a rush that all but overcame Georgetown's ample 23-8 half-time lead.

Behind the deadly shooting of little Harry Lothes, West Virginia cut the deficit to 28-22 and 30-25 before the Hoyas staged a quick counter attack to save their margin.

Lothes' three fine set shots, plus another in the first half, marked him as West Virginia's outstanding player and tied him with Center Homer Brooks for scoring honors at eight points.

But to Johnny Schmitt, Georgetown's Flying Dutchman who is called by Ripley the fastest man in college basketball today, went the victor's spoils—13 points—which he threw in by every possible means. From the floor, from under the basket and from the foul line, too, Schmitt was nothing short of a sensation and his point total shoved him into the front ranks of the conference point getters.

McGowan Is Hero

Besides Schmitt, blond Johnny McGowan, one of the players whose name was prominently mentioned in Ripley's threat of a shake-up, was the Hoyas' hero. For it was McGowan, all 6 foot 3-inches of him, who was roving the court like a demon in the first half, retrieving the balls from both backboards and feeding his mates passes for second tries. McGowan also found time in his roving to toss in four field goals to share with Capt. Joe Murphy runner-up scoring honors.

Due chiefly to West Virginia's puzzling zone defense Georgetown

FBI Quintet Upset, 38-24, By Dapper Dan

Clinton Price's Dapper Dan Possers last night contributed the outstanding upset of the season in Heurich Amateur Basketball League competition when they upset Federal Bureau of Investigation's veteran five, 38-24, in Heurich gymnasium.

This victory earns Dapper Dan the right to oppose Delaware and Hudson in the first-half Heurich Amateur League's championship play-off game at Heurich gymnasium Sunday.

PWA nosed out United Clay in a second-half Heurich League contest, 36-33, and Delaware and Hudson defeated Little Tavern, 39-17.

Empty Saddles—and Grandstand, Too, at Gulfstream Park

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

There was no racing yesterday at the Gulfstream Park, new t rack at Hollywood, Fla., but they forgot to tell Gatekeeper E. F. Hamilton the meet was off, and he reported for duty. He stands beside a tarpaulin-covered scale, while in the distance can be seen the empty grandstand—and the unfini shed portion. The remainder of a scheduled 40-day meeting was suddenly canceled after the tr ack had been in operation four days.

Difficulties In Finances Cause Move

Officials, However, Say Plant Will Be Reopened Soon; Blame 'Mix-up'

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Fla., Feb. 6.—John C. Horning, youthful president of Gulfstream Park which closed suddenly today, announced tonight arrangements were being made to reopen in a few days.

The racetrack, the third in the Miami area and operating simultaneously with Hialeah Park, was closed with the announcement the meeting was off just before the regular card of eight races was to start.

Horning, however, said the reported cancellation of the meeting by John F. Letendre, managing director, was incorrect.

"We are arranging to reopen in a few days—as soon as possible," the 28-year-old builder and track president stated. "While the first announcement was that the meeting had been canceled it really was nothing more than a postponement."

"Mix-up" at Bank

It was said that today's difficulties resulted from inability to obtain change money required for mutuel operations but "just whose fault this was isn't known at the moment." When a call was made on the bank for the money it was learned that it wasn't available, and without mutuel funds the track was unable to start its regular races, an associate of Horning explained.

Letendre made his announcement in the racing secretary's office after a conference with Horning and Joel Hurt, vice president.

"Gentlemen, I have bad news for you," he said. "The meeting is off. That's all the information I have."

The word was broadcast over the loud-speaker system to the patrons already on hand and the men at the gates were instructed to sell no more tickets. About 500 horses stabled at the track will be allowed to remain until their owners can make other arrangements.

Hornning and Hurt went into seclusion. Horning, member of a wealthy Pittsburgh steel family, was obviously stricken at the development.

As a contractor, he had taken over the moribund project when the original promoters were unable to go through with it and pushed it to completion within two months, living in an automobile trailer on the grounds and working literally day and night. He put up most of the $1,400,000 required to build the plant and get it ready to open.

Financial Backing Fails

Associates then were to have furnished funds needed for operating, according to unofficial word at the track, and it was the failure of this financing that made it necessary to close. These associates were assumed to have concluded that the first few days of the track's operation held little promise for future success.

Some 15,000 attended the opening last Wednesday, when Sonja Henie, the skating star, snipped a ribbon to open the racing strip, but after that the attendance fell off to a few thousand. It averaged about one-fourth the attendance of Hialeah Park and the betting never reached six figures. Last Saturday Gulfstream's pari-mutuel "handle" was $81,922 compared with $517,939 at Joseph E. Widener's famous track.

Gulfstream officials said from the start that they were "conflicting but not competing" with Hialeah. Their horses mostly were a class unable to meet the strict conditions at Hialeah and their admission prices were lower. Gulfstream's meeting was to have run 40 days, conflicting with Hialeah until March 4 and with Tropical Park after that. Even in New York, only one race track operates at a time.

Jimmy Jones Bows to Cisco By Decision

Johnny Dube Wins Semifinal Over Pete Galiano

Tony Cisco, a rugged young Italian from Norristown, outroughed Jimmy Jones, of Baltimore, in an eight-round feature bout last night at the Arena, winning a unanimous decision.

It was a bitterly contested engagement but failed to measure up to the eight-round semifinal in which Johnny Dube bested Galiano. Both were hard-fought tests of brute strength more than of boxing skill, although there was more science employed in the semifinal.

Jones, much slower than he was on his last appearance here, was an easy target for Cisco's right hooks to the head and body and was on the receiving end throughout the fight. The rugged Baltimore boy opened up sporadically with looping rights, but Cisco covered well and suffered no ill effects.

Cisco tagged his opponent with bristling, businesslike rights in the fourth, fifth and seventh rounds but didn't pack enough dynamite to put him on deck. There were no knockdowns, unless you want to count a no-count Referee Ray Bowen took in the final round when he tripped and fell. Jones weighed 158¼, and Cisco, 154½.

Johnny Dube (136½), of New York, who was teethed on a punching bag at the Jewish Community Center, won a split decision over Pete Galiano (139), hard-punching little Italian from Baltimore. It was an exhausting battle, with Galiano rallying in the closing stages to make it close.

On the Post score sheet Galiano earned a draw with his clever opponent, for his punches inflicted the greater damage, and for brief periods in the fifth and sixth rounds it seemed as if though he might bring Dube down with a series of punishing blasts to the midsection.

Dube, however, weathered the storm, boxing nicely and was holding his own at the finish. Dube had things pretty much his own way in the first four rounds, sticking Pete with a long jab and crossing with a stinging right that eventually drew blood. Galiano's right eye was cut in the fourth round, and Dube tried hard to work on the wound, but to no avail.

Buddy Thomas (159) rallied in the last round of his eight-rounder with Vince De Pola (164¼) to get the nod. It was an even fight going into the last round, but Thomas opened up with his heavy artillery and had the Baltimorean hanging on at the finish.

Ben Cohen (162½) took the opening four-rounder from Steve Andrews (162¾), and Billy Banks (132) outpointed Willie Green (132) in another. Green substituted for "Battling" Goose.

Georgetown Plays REA Sextet on Thursday

The girls basketball game between Georgetown A. C. and Rural Electric Administration, slated for last night at the Woodrow Wilson gym, has been moved up to Thursday, when the girls will meet at Boiling Field gym. Georgetown A. C. leads the Washington Recreation Basketball League and its opponent is runner-up. The Hyattsville-Phil Bobys game tonight has been shifted from the Hine Junior High gym to Hyattsville.

Cotton's Interview Price Is 60 Guineas

And Wants Considerably More for a Story of His Life, Correspondent Learns in Trip to England

By George Kirksey.

New York, Feb. 6.—Notes brought back from the British sports front:

The first athlete I tried to interview in London was Henry Cotton, who wanted 60 guineas (about $300) for a "few tidbits" how he became the self-styled world's greatest golfer . . . And he added that if I wanted to write the story of his life it would cost me considerably more . . . Later I found out from the boys around the press club that Cotton has some pretty definite ideas about what he wants to do and No. 1 is an overwhelming desire to make money.

Whatever else may be said about Cotton they all agree that he is one of the greatest golfers England has ever produced . . . He came up the hard way, learning to hit a ball in a garden in his father's backyard and later playing on top of one of London's reservoir. When he started playing professionally his uncontrolled temper almost wrecked his game, but he finally conquered his emotions . . . John McAdams, sports columnist of the London Daily Express, says of the present-day Cotton: "He steps on the first tee, plays his game like a robot an' leaves as soon as he's finished. He has no time for the crowd and never allows anything outwardly to disturb him."

England's universal sport is darts . . . Almost every pub over there has a dart board and the game is played by young and old, commoner and highbrow . . . And it isn't as easy or sissy as you'd imagine . . . Don't let any Britisher ever wangle you into playing a round of darts for the bill because some of them make William Tell look like an amateur.

Remember ol' fainting Phil Scott who put on his weird exhibition with Jack Sharkey at Miami? . . . He runs a beauty and health parlor and tries to pick up a few quid on the side participating in those boxer vs. wrestler things . . . Last time he went to the post the wrestler pinned him in 2 minutes and something . . . Same old Phil . . . Of England's old-time fighters, Bombardier Wells is the most popular . . . He used to have a pub in Bloomsbury, but sold it and now plays heavy roles in the movies. . . . Eric Boon, 19-year-old son of a Cambridgeshire blacksmith who recently won the British lightweight title, is the lad to watch as a future opponent for Henry Armstrong . . . He lacks boxing finesse but has a kick like a mule in both fists . . . Tommy Farr can stay away from England as long as he likes . . . They don't care for any part of him over there.

Americans are pikers when it comes to betting on football . . . Somewhere between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000 is bet in the legalized football pools every season in England . . . You have to bet on a credit, making your bet one week and paying the next, according to law, but if you "welsh" on a bet you're put on a blacklist and that's worse than losing in an Englishman's code.

Syd Wooderson, one of the world's greatest milers, is one of the world's purest amateurs . . . He slaves all day in a solicitor's office and runs for the fun of it . . . British track and field followers always will believe that Wooderson would have beaten Jack Lovelock in the 1,500-meter race at the Berlin Olympics if he hadn't come up with a bum ankle the week of the race . . . They never heard of "Whizzer" White in England as far as I could make out . . . Len Harvey, British heavyweight champion, is one of the most intelligent pugilists I ever met . .

WHITE

Detroit, Feb. 6 (AP).—Joyner (Jo-Jo) White, former Detroit Tiger outfielder, said tonight he had decided to quit baseball and devote all of his time to a job in a Detroit automobile plant.

He is the property of the Seattle Club of the Pacific Coast League, having been traded by the Tigers several months ago in the transaction that brought Fred Hutchinson, young Seattle pitching sensation, into the Detroit fold.

"I guess old Jo-Jo is about washed up with the game," White said as he revealed that his retirement was the result of a salary dispute with the Seattle management.

"I told them what I wanted to play out there and they told me what they would give me," White said. "We weren't anywhere near each other and Manager Jack Lelivelt, of Seattle, told me not to write him any more, so I'm not going to write."

Galento Still Rated First, Says Miller

N.B.C. Chairman Denies Reports of Committee Rebellion

The National Boxing Association in all probability will continue to rate Tony Galento its No. 1 contender for the heavyweight throne, Heinie Miller, chairman of the ratings committee, said last night, denying reports that some members of the committee would call for a new deal.

The committee is scheduled to meet in Washington the middle of next month to compile ratings for the first quarter of this year, and that Galento's case undoubtedly would be discussed, but failed to see how anything could be done about dislodging Galento.

"Tommy Farr and Lou Nova," he pointed out, were offered matches with Galento in New Jersey, but declined them. Galento repeatedly has expressed his willingness to fight Baer or any other top-ranking heavyweight to prove his right to the No. 1 rating, but nobody will meet him.

"As for these alleged 'dives' Galento has figured in, let me point out that none have been in States affiliated with the National Boxing Association. Michigan had seen Natie Brown before, and they knew what kind of a fighter he was—why didn't they stop the match before the articles were signed? Their own referee counted out Brown, making it a legitimate knockout. There was no complaint at that time, and I fail to see how they can make one after it's all over."

"Joe Triner," Miller continued, "the member absent at the last meeting of the ratings committee, dissented, I admit, but when we asked whom he would rate No. 1, he was undecided. Naturally, we

Football Drove Ed Andrews to Stage

The Big 'Moron' Would Rather Choke Rabbits Than Box Tackles

By Ben Bane Dulaney.
Post Sports Editor.

Even if you happened to see some of the worst University of Virginia football teams in history play in the early thirties you wouldn't recognize the towering, pathetic figure of Lennie in "Of Mice and Men" at the National Theater this week as the one-time star tackle of those awful aggregations.

Lennie, the huge moron who squeezes rabbits to death because he wants to be friends and finally strangles a blonde to end the tragedy, is Edward Bryan Andrews, a mild and affable gentleman who hates football.

"In Pittsburgh where I went to high school,' Andrews says, "they made me play because I was so big. In my last year I thought I had them fooled, but they elected me captain and I had to play some more.

"I dodged some athletic scholarships to come to Virginia and do a little acting, but they dragged me out and shamed me into football anyhow."

Probably Andrews' greatest gridiron triumph came the day Ohio State defeated Virginia, 75-0, for the worst beating in 60 years. Despite the steamroller of four smashing Buckeye squads, each anxious to make itself the regular team, Andrews managed to play the whole game and came out of the business a trifle dazed but in one piece.

Andrews swears that the referee came to him late in the fourth quarter and proffered his whistle.

Former Cavalier Star Here on Stage; Recalls Virginia's 75-0 Rout

"Let me play for a while," he alleges the ref said, "And you blow this. I'm tired."

It was the week after this holocaust that Andrews and his badly bent fellows managed to lead Columbia at the half and lost by only one touchdown. That was in 1934 and, if you remember, Columbia won in the Rose Bowl that year.

At the university, Andrews acted for three years in Virginia Players' productions. His 6 feet 4 inches made him too big to play leads, but he played a lot of them anyhow because he was one of the best actors in the valley.

But he finally fooled the coaches. In 1935, instead of returning to Virginia for his degree—and more football—he started to starve on Broadway.

He had parts in several plays that didn't last long, then got the second lead in "So Proudly We Hail" with Richard Cromwell.

Outside of the information that he's made several movie shorts, that's all Andrews will tell you about himself. It's not generally known, however, that he appeared off and on for two years in an opus called "Behind Red Lights," of which nothing more need be said than it broke "Abie's Irish Rose's" record in Brooklyn. It ran 18 weeks there.

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

By Ben Bane Dulaney.

An open letter to 5,000,000 deer, bear, antelopes, peccaries, wild boar, buffalo, moose, bighorn, caribou, elk and mountain goats:

Dear Fellows: The Dept. of Agri. likes to count things and through the years has thoroughly shamed its competitor, the Bu. of the Census. The Bu. of the Census lists only prosaic items like iron workers and window cleaners and newspaper men and people in general. But the Dept. of Agri. goes in for cornstalks and bushels of hops and hen houses and Swiss cheese. It seems that everybody in that tremendous pile of masonry, everybody you see pad-padding up Fourteenth-street 4:30 of afternoons, just dotes on counting.

DULANEY

Now gentlemen and ladies, the indefatigable Dept. of Agri. has just finished counting you, yourselves, and reports there are 5,000,000 of you left in the United States.

It seems impossible. Considering that you gentlemen don't cotton much to the clang and clatter of many-towered cities, that you flee from the rush and roar along highways and rails of steel. Considering that your bodies were food necessities for 300 years in a growing, fighting country, that since that time an ever growing number of sportsmen have driven you farther and farther back into the shrinking forests. Considering these things, it seems impossible.

Dept. of Agri. Must Be Right

But if the Dept. of Agri. says it's so, we reckon it's so. The Dept. doesn't say how they did the counting but presumably it was done according to approved Bu. of Census method: The personal interview.

Take Virginia's report, for instance. The Old Dominion ranks twenty-eighth among the States with 15,000 white-tailed deer, 600 black bears and 140 elk. Now the enumerator probably started out in a station wagon with one tame white-tailed deer, one friendly black bear and one housebroken elk to act as interpreters.

Down below Warrenton somewhere, along about where the rich rolling Virginia bluegrass starts climbing into the timberlands of the Blue Ridge, our enumerator—hereinafter known as Jake—probably parked his car and repaired to the fastnesses of a wooded knoll. Then, it is possible he gave the go sign to his friends the tame deer, bear and elk and they all made noises which mean in talking language: "Come on, chums, gather 'round. Jake is here with a lot of hamburgers and stuff, free for answering just a few simple questions."

So, doubtless, there was a great clamor in the underbrush as the word was passed to the fartherest hinterlands. And there was a monstrous rushing and growling and squeeking as all the wild elk and bear and white-tailed deer converged on the wooded knoll.

And when all were assembled and the tempting hamburger spread on the ground just out of reach, the interpreters probably started in: "Here, you big boy, the one with the left ear missing, what's your name?"

"Abelard Bar."

"Age and occupation?"

"Age, 24; occupation, bar tender."

"Family, how many?"

"W'al, it's sort of scattered. A Baltimore plumber got Lemuel last November. Same bunch of galoots took m'left ear with 'em. Betsy ran off with a travelin' feller, joined some kind of tent show, I think. They got Hiram up to the We Fix Flats Fillin' Station. Gottem in a cage up thar.

"Allinall, I'd say about 30 or 40 in my family, sorta scattered. Gimme some of that hamburgy . . ."

All on Blue and Pink and Yellow Cards

And so on, while Jake, the enumerator, put it all down on little blue, pink and yellow cards to make it harder for the file clerks.

Maybe that's the way the Dept. of Agri. made their census of game animals in America and maybe it wasn't. But their information for the press section has it all down in black letters, so it must be true.

In California, 304,000 mule deer, 150 wild boars and 59 buffalo. In Maryland, 12,750 white-tailed deer and 150 black bear; even in New Jersey—a place most of us think as entirely filled with mosquitos, summer resorts, politics and lunchwagons—8,000 deer; in Michigan most game animals of all the States: 878,000, including 1,000 moose, 8 buffalo and 5 elk. (This department has a bet up that there's a whale of a fight coming if there are three gentlemen elk and only two elkesses and romance arrives with the springtime).

Only in Delaware and the District of Columbia are there none of you gentlemen and ladies. When Jake tried his system in the woods near Wilmington his tame trio bawled their heads off without result. When they went to work in Meridian Park here a lot of prison bars shook down Harvard street in the Zoo but nary a single white-tailed deer bounded across Sixteenth street on a red light to garner hamburger largesse.

Anyway, you 5,000,000 Original Inhabitants, this department is proud of you, proud that your numbers have stood against the inroads of a doubtful civilization, against a pointless program of ruthless slaughter which has only been lessened in this century.

This department, along with all the State game commissioners, all the conservation and wildlife bodies, all true sportsmen everywhere, wishes you long and happy lives.

Giants Sign Ainsmith as Talent Scout

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 6.—The New York Giants added a little variety to the routine announcements of signing of players today by announcing the signing of a scout. Eddie Ainsmith, former major league catcher, who handled Walter John's fireball for many years, will look over prospects for the Giants in the Eastern division.

Signed contracts of Clydell Castleman, pitcher; Harry Gumbert, pitcher, and Jimmy Ripple, outfielder, were received at the Giants' office today.

Rickey Denies Rumor

New York, Feb 6 (AP).—Branch Rickey today branded rumors that he would sever his connections with the St. Louis Cardinals to team with Larry McPhail in the purchase of the Brooklyn Dodgers as "wild talk with no element of truth."

"McPhail doesn't need any help," Rickey said, "and I have my hands full with my cardinal duties."

Brooklyn Gets Three

Kansas City, Feb. 6 (AP).—Three members of the Kansas City Blues, Little World Series champions of 1938, were purchased today by Brooklyn of the National League, Blues officials announced.

Jack Larocca, right-handed hurler, was sold by the Kansas City club; Kemp Wicker, southpaw pitcher, by Newark of the International League, and Chris Hartje, young catcher, by the New York Yankees. Both Newark and Kansas City are members of the Yankee farm system.

Passeau Signs With Phils

Philadelphia, Feb. 6 (AP).—The Phillies announced today Claude Passeau, one of their starting pitchers, had signed a contract for the 1939 season. Receipt of a signed contract from Outfielder Legrant Scott, drafted from Indianapolis, was also announced.

At the same time President Gerry Nugent said the Phils had completed a working agreement with Pensacola of the Florida State League.

Western Five Trims Purple Cagers, 31-26

Western High's basketball team, winless in the interhigh series to date, continued its victory streak over outside teams yesterday on the Gonzaga floor, trailing for two periods and then staging a third-quarter rally that beat the defenders, 31-26.

Both coaches kept most of their first-string players on the bench for the first half, and Gonzaga's reserves seemed much the stronger. They shut out the invaders in the first period while amassing a 7-point lead, but sagged to a bare 13-10 edge at intermission.

Western gradually found the range for long pot shots, being unable to crack Gonzaga's zone defense, as the second half began and Bob Holloran, Hal Beatty and Frank Dwyer pulled the club into a 20-17 lead before the third session was half gone. They stretched it to 24-19 as the quarter ended.

With Freddy Rice, Purple forward, carrying most of the burden, Gonzaga was able to match the Raiders, point for point in the final quarter. Holloran's two lengthy two-pointers featured the period.

High point man of the contest was Rice, who stole through Western's man-to-man defense for five snowbirds and dropped four foul shots for 14 points. Holloran was right behind with 12.

The late minutes of the game saw Lane O'Donnell, lanky Purple regular of last year, enter the line-up for the first time this season. Because of the school doctor's orders, O'Donnell, a flashy end on the grid squad, was kept from practice until recently for a long rest. His return to the team enhances its flagging chances for the Catholic Prep title which St. John's has all but sewed up.

Manor, Chevy Chase Clubs to Sponsor Invitation Tourneys

Third Event Is Planned At Woodmont

D. McGrew Succeeds Fowler as President; Amateur Tournament To Burning Tree Club

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Two invitation tournaments were assured local golf fans, with a third pending, at the annual meeting of the District Golf Association last night at the University Club. Manor and Chevy Chase received May dates, while Woodmont will decide in the near future as to opening the tournament calendar with their bi-annual affair.

D. D. L. McGrew, a member of the body for many years, representing the Chevy Chase Club, was elected by a unanimous vote to succeed Ralph S. Fowler, Washington, as president, while other officers likewise installed without opposition were Dr. Robert A. Keilty, first vice president; Dr. Paul Stewart, Columbia, second vice president, and Dr. W. C. Barr, secretary, the latter an annual appointment.

Cosgrove, Steinem Named.

James A. Cosgrove, Manor, and Albert E. Steinem, Woodmont, were again elected to the executive committee, while Commander W. S. Popham, Army and Navy, and Dr. Thomas Utz, Indian Spring, succeeded Commander K. S. Patton and J. Taylor, Fowler, as outgoing president, automatically becomes a member.

Burning Tree was awarded the District amateur tournament after a lapse of nine years, September 20 through 22, while the District junior championship will be played at Army and Navy, June 28 through 30, and the annual mixed Scotch foursome at Kenwood, September 27.

Fowler continued his plan to form a stronger association among the clubs of the Metropolitan area, possibly at the price of withdrawing from the Maryland, Middle Atlantic and Virginia bodies, and President McGrew will appoint a delegate from each club to meet with Fowler and members of the associations concerned at a later date to take action.

Sees Bad Weaknesses

Recognizing the glaring weaknesses of the local golf bodies, Fowler's idea is to form an organization that will not only serve as a clearing house for the sectional tournaments, but undertake and act on problems of mass buying, controlling members, caddies, greens, and other problems.

A motion was passed to form a District greens sections, with Dr. Keilty, former Congressional greens chairman, as the instigator. McGrew will also appoint a committee to work with Dr. Keilty and plan an annual meeting.

A junior scholastic golf committee was also formed, on a motion of former President James Cosgrove, who worked with Frank Emmet, Georgetown Prep's backer of schoolboy golf, two years ago. The group, to be approved by the executive committee on names submitted by Emmet, will work with Birch Bayh, schoolboy athletic director on the 1939 scholastic schedule. The association will again sponsor the Metropolitan League that was successful last year in its inaugural appearance on the calendar.

An attempt to prevent the recurrence of the situation in last year's District Amateur when Johnny Burke, of Rhode Island, entered the tournament in his first week at Georgetown University and won, as a member of the Capital Club, was found amply covered in the by-laws. Burke's handicap in Connecticut and the fact that he was a bona-fide member of the club clarified the matter. No time limit was set as to how long a participant had to be District G. A. club member.

Collegians Form Golf League Here

G. W. and Maryland Members; Schedule for Round-Robin Planned

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A five-member Maryland Intercollegiate Golf Association, including George Washington, Maryland, Western Maryland, Loyola and Baltimore, will play a round-robin league schedule for the State team championship, Otto Greiner, acting secretary of the group, announced yesterday.

The formation of the league marks the first step the member institutions have taken toward putting golf on an official basis. Paul Burtis, former Roosevelt High linksman and captain of the Western Maryland team, called the meeting and a complete schedule was drawn up. Johns Hopkins University may be admitted before the initial matches in April.

Greiner, Maryland, Middle Atlantic and State Intercollegiate champion, from the University of Baltimore, was named secretary; Johnny Farrell, former Middle Atlantic Junior champion, representing Loyola; Jimmy Brownell will captain the Maryland team, and Willis Hard, George Washington, will represent the District school on the board.

Each team, composed of four men, will play the others, with the matches starting the first week in April and the schedule finishing the middle of May. Maryland will use the Indian Spring course, Western Maryland will play its home matches on the school layout, Loyola and Baltimore will alternate between Rolling Road, Woodholme and Hillendale, while G. W. will use Indian Spring and possibly other courses. A trophy, donated by a Baltimore merchant, will be awarded the winning team.

Greiner, whose sensational victory streak last year earned Nation-wide recognition, is the outstanding player in the league, but as a group the teams appear well

Wash.-Lee Five Trounced by Bethesda, 41-18

Only 2 of the 12 players used by Bethesda-Chevy Chase in a cage game with Washington-Lee High, of Arlington, yesterday, failed to score as the Bethesdans marked up a 41-18 victory. It was the easiest triumph of the season for the suburban basketers.

By half-time the eventual winners had amassed a 19-5 advantage. This was increased throughout the second half by reserves. Hilleary Hayden, Bethesda center, led his team's victory march with 8 points, but four other Bethesdans turned in totals of 6 points. Howell, Little General center, took individual honors for the game with 10 points.

Ohio State Bows; Indiana in Lead

Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 6 (AP).—Indiana's high-powered cagers climbed into first place of the Big Ten basketball standing tonight with a brilliant 46-to-34 victory over Ohio State, only team that has beaten the Hoosiers this year.

Before a crowd of 6,500, Indiana turned on the heat with the opening whistle and never was headed.

F. B. I. Meets Chambers On Court Tonight

First-half Heurich Amateur Basketball League play will be brought to a close in Heurich gumnasium tonight at 9:30 o'clock when W. W. Chambers Co. meets Federal Bureau of Investigation.

In supporting games Hot Shoppes engage PWA at 7:30 o'clock and Regal Clothiers oppose Hour Glass at 8:30 o'clock.

Central Mixes With Roosevelt In High Series

Return of Farr, Perlo Features Twin Bill; Anacostia, Tech Meet

Minus a regular who made possible much of its basketball success this year, but boasting the return of a stellar veteran in his place, Central High moves back into the interhigh cage wars today at Roosevelt, meeting the home team in the featured game of a double-header. Anacostia and Tech come to grips to start proceedings at 3:30.

The Mount Pleasanters lost "Slim" Quidley, regular center, by graduation last week, but his place will be taken by Dick Farr, the scoring "find" of last season. Farr has been ineligible scholastically since the start of the current series.

Whatever hopes the return of Farr may have caused in Central breasts were considerably dampened by the announcement yesterday from the Roosevelt gym that Hymie Perlo, star forward who was kept out of the Rider's last game, will probably be in the line-up today. Perlo, one of the high scorers of the series, was temporarily benched Friday due to words with his coach, Herman Littman.

With the Rider squad once again intact and confident of a place in the public high playoff starting February 24, Central will be pushed to the limit to improve the .666 standing it already has. Roosevelt owns only a .500 rating, having been beaten by the strongest clubs in the league, Eastern and Wilson, but it goes into the Central clash slightly favored, nevertheless.

Though McKinley finally got on the victory track with a trouncing of much-beaten Western last Friday, its record will be put to the test in the game with Anacostia. So far

Lund Cracks Game Record At Brookland

Overend Posts Two Season's Marks in Kilowatt League

Bill Humphrey and I. O. Lund took turns cracking the season's high-game record in the Odd Fellows League, at Brookland Recreation last night, Humphrey breaking the old mark of 153 in the second game with 156 and Lund following with 158 in the third game to set a new high.

The leading Columbia No. 1 team increased its lead from three to four games by winning the odd tilt from Amity No. 1, while the second-place Brightwood lost two to Eastern.

KILOWATT LEAGUE

Joe Overend, a member of the Transit team, posted two new season's records in the Kilowatt League at Lucky Strike, a 166 game and 429 set. Transit's team game of 1,729 also set a new mark and aided in taking three from Meters. Substation chalked up a 625 game in blanking Oldtimers, led by Ed Connick's 136-363.

A. & P. LEAGUE

Condon's league-leading five in the A. & P. League at Lucky Strike dropped a pair to Sparkle, despite Ben Douglas' 134-366. Walter Osin had 152-384 as Atlantics shut out Mayfairs.

PROCUREMENT

The league leading Incas had high game for the night in the Procurement League at Lucky Strike, while Empires recorded the top set of 1,621. Cadzow's 147 and White led the individual game and set highs.

GEORGIA AVENUE

Bill Dlumenauer's 389 set paced the Petworth Pharmacy team to an odd game triumph over Sandford's in the Georgia Avenue League at Silver Spring, while William's Heating won two from National Electric Machines, led by Charles Humphries, 342.

Colesville Service Station won two out of three over Monument Electric, with Bill Hobbs 349 best, and Senate Lunch won the odd one from Cornelius Printing, with Tom Bonifant's 341 tops.

JEWELERS LEAGUE

A. Kahn's 589 game and 1,706 set led the teams in the Jeweler's League at Chevy Chase, while individual highs went to W. Bachschmid's 146 game and a 368 set by W. Ellis.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Jack Cruit's 368 set and Bill Mackie's 149 game bested the bowlers in the Chamber of Commerce League at Chevy Chase, while Aces and Arrows topped the teams with 552 and 1,544.

C. C. COMMERCIAL

Penell's 395 set topped the Chevy Chase Commercial statistics for the night, aided by a 154 game. Covington Motor's 570 and 1,631 led the teams.

FEDERAL MEN'S

Astor Clarke returned to his pace-setting form in the Federal Men's League at Arcadia, boosting his average with a 147 game and 410 set. Clarke's team, Federal Bureau of Investigation, made a clean sweep of the night's honors with a 626 game and 1,789 set.

Stadium Model Goes on Display

Plans and models of the proposed athletic stadium for Washington will be on display tomorrow night when the stadium committee of the Touchdown Club meets with civic leaders at the Hamilton Hotel to discuss definite designs.

Whatever conclusions are reached at the meeting are expected to be taken directly to Congress, where several Senators and Representatives have already promised to support a bill for the coliseum. Thomas Sandoz, real estate boardman, will show blue prints of the land proposed as a stadium site. It is at the end of East Capitol street, near Eastern High School.

Plaster of Paris models of the proposed edifice will also be shown. The meeting will be staged under the sanction of the Park and Planning Commission.

New York, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Aldo Spoldi, 136, Italy, outpointed Norment Quarles, 139¼, Richmond, Va., in the eight-round main bout tonight at St. Nicholas Arena.

B.Y.P.U. Is Ready For Title Series

When Victory Post of the American Legion and the Baptist Young People's Union indoor baseball teams square off tomorrow night in the first two games of a series for the city championship, the Baptists will have a good chance of upsetting the team that has taken the city title for the past two years.

Since the close of the regular season, Willard Kirtland of the Baptists has kept his squad of stars in top shape with regular weekly workouts. Twenty players, the cream of the league, have met at Roosevelt every Monday night and practiced until the wee small hours.

Morris Bealle, athletic director of Victory Post, meanwhile makes no claims except that his team will make a playoff unnecessary by winning both of tomorrow night's games.

never functioned as smoothly as in earlier games here this season, and at times looked more like a sandlot team than the polished five which led Ripley to predict that it would be the best Georgetown squad since 1930.

The Hoyas quickly riddled the Mountaineers' defense to pile up a 11-1 advantage before Sam Mandich halted the uneven scoring by pushing in a follow shot, and Charley Seabright made good two free throws.

But this failed to dishearten Georgetown and with Schmitt, Murphy and McGowan collaborating in a fancy passing display the Hoyas went into intermission leading by 15 points, 23-8.

Sir Damion, 1-4 Favorite, Wins in Photo Finish

Don Meade's Smart Ride Brings Home Field's Star in Desperate Duel

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 6.—What would have been the biggest upset of the season was narrowly averted here this afternoon when Marshall Field's Sir Damion, 1-to-4 favorite over four rivals, responded just enough to Don Meade's powerful handling to score a nose victory in the Casa Loma Purse of six furlongs. The Sir Gallahad III 5-year-old ran into surprisingly tough opposition from Shady Brook Farm Stable's Grass Cutter, but after the most desperate duel of the meeting Sir Damion survived a photo finish. B. F. Whitaker's Mythical King was third, six lengths away.

The time for the six furlongs was 1:11 1-5.

Sir Damion remains undefeated in winter competition, with three victories here. He, along with Mythical King and Shangay Lily, was nominated for the Widener Challenge Cup of a mile and a quarter, but his race today added to the doubt that Trainer George Odom will point him for the closing day classic. Odom's chief reliance for the Widener, of course, is Mrs. W. Plunket Stewart's Pasteurized.

Sir Damion broke well, as usual, and stole a length and a half lead while disposing of Becky Bates in the first three furlongs. Grass Cutter amazed the spectators by drawing alongside Sir Damion around the bend. He appeared to have Sir Damion beaten as they sailed into the stretch. But Meade, whose mount was on the inside, hit the favorite a couple of times with the whip near the sixteenth pole and Sir Damion's class asserted itself. Through the closing strides, Meade put the whip away and outrode Nunzio Pariso on Grass Cutter to keep his mount's nose in front.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIR DAMION, $2.50, $2.20, $2.20; GRASS CUTTER, $2.40, $2.20; MYTHICAL KING, $3.20.

SIR DAMION held his position safe for speed, was rated in front under light restraint while saving ground, responded with determination under a strong ride when the final test came and outlasted GRASS CUTTER. The latter, eased off the pace until the stretch turn, moved up menacingly on the outside when placed to pressure, assumed a brief lead in the stretch run, but then hung right at the end. MYTHICAL KING gradually worked his way up on the inside and shook off BECKY BATES in the stretch run, but was no nearest pursuit of the leader for the furlongs. She appeared to have lost one of her plates midway around the turn, but continued gamely and turned in a creditable performance.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:46. Off at 4:47. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ASKARIS, $27.60, $10.10, $6.00; MAESTROM, $5.30, $4.10; JOLYON, $4.70.

ASKARIS, going in his best form, moved into contention with a rush on the inside in the run down the backstretch. He took command on the stretch turn, shook off MAESTROM after a mild drive and won in hand. MAESTROM, kept in close pursuit of the leader in the early stages, was no match for the winner in the final quarter mile. JOLYON, on the extreme outside all the way, disposed of the others in the stretch run. SILAS had no mishaps. ALBUQUERQUE stopped badly the last quarter mile.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:17. Off at 5:19½. Winner, I. Bieber's ch. m. (5), by Gallant Knight or St. Henry—Donna Juana. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48, 1:12 3-5, 1:39 2-5, 1:53.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAIDONA, $7.50, $4.80, $3.50; RITZ BROTHERS, $4.60, $3.60; MY WO, $4.00.

SAIDONA, a prominent contender in the early running, raced PONIARD into submission around the lower turn, drew out when straightened into the stretch, but was under punishment to withstand the bid of RITZ BROTHERS. The latter, rated off the early pace, bettered his position gradually after leaving the backstretch, made a bid entering the stretch, but continued to swerve behind the winner when placed to a drive and Meade was unable to do him full justice. MY WO went forwardly the first half mile, but dropped back rounding the turn. He came again through the stretch to shake off PONIARD. The latter, away fast, displayed early foot, but then retired in the final quarter mile.

EIGHTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:16. Off at 4:16. Winner, Marshall Field's b. h. (3), by Sir Gallahad III—Cumidad. Trained by G. D. Odom. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:22 4-5, 0:46 1-5, 1:11 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIR DAMION, $2.50, $2.20, $2.20; GRASS CUTTER, $2.40, $2.20; MYTHICAL KING, $3.20.

SIR DAMION held his position safe for speed, was rated in front under light restraint while saving ground, responded with determination under a strong ride when the final test came and outlasted GRASS CUTTER. The latter, eased off the pace until the stretch turn, moved up menacingly on the outside when placed to pressure, assumed a brief lead in the stretch run, but then hung right at the end. MYTHICAL KING gradually worked his way up on the inside and shook off BECKY BATES in the stretch run, but was no nearest pursuit of the leader for the furlongs. She appeared to have lost one of her plates midway around the turn, but continued gamely and turned in a creditable performance.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:46. Off at 4:47. Winner, Cosgrave Stable's ch. h. (5), by St. Henry—Lady Louise. Trained by A. E. Alexandra. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48, 1:13 2-5, 1:40 1-5, 1:53 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ASKARIS, $27.60, $10.10, $6.00; MAESTROM, $5.30, $4.10; JOLYON, $4.70.

ASKARIS, going in his best form, moved into contention with a rush on the inside in the run down the backstretch. He took command on the stretch turn, shook off MAESTROM after a mild drive and won in hand. MAESTROM, kept in close pursuit of the leader in the early stages, was no match for the winner in the final quarter mile. JOLYON, on the extreme outside all the way, disposed of the others in the stretch run. SILAS had no mishaps. ALBUQUERQUE stopped badly the last quarter mile.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ABBATORO, $3.90, $2.80, $2.50; CRIUS, $6.30, $2.90; SUN MICA, $2.60.

ABBATORO, slugrish in the early running, dropped far out of it rounding the first turn. He began to better his position in the final half mile while saving much ground and wore the leaders down in the final drive. CRIUS improved his position while going extremely wide. He took command entering the stretch, but was troubled by SUN MICA drifting out and faltered in the last strides. SUN MICA, rushed to the front, raced LIFE GUARD into defeat. He continued gamely while bearing out after entering the stretch, but could not withstand the leader's bid. LIFE GUARD went in near pursuit of the leader in the early stages, but weakened in the last quarter mile.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EXARCH, $11.80, $5.80, $4.20; WAKE ROBIN, $5.10, $3.90; HALCYON BOY, $6.20.

EXARCH, quickest to get going, assumed a short lead in the opening furlong and, continuing with determination, held WAKE ROBIN safe in the final drive. WAKE ROBIN and the winner brushed each other at the start. WAKE ROBIN went to the inside and, guided by the inner rail, made a game effort, but could not get up. HALCYON BOY, a forward contender throughout, held on tenaciously to outlast GREAT ALBERT. The latter, in the thick of contention the early stages, faltered slightly in the final drive. TOWN BOY, slow to find his stride, showed a dull effort.

SECOND RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:35. Off at 2:35. Winner, M. Reiser's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IDEAL FUNGI, $10.20, $5.00, $3.90; VICUNA, $15.50, $8.50; QUICK CHANGE, $4.90.

IDEAL FUNGI, prominent contender all the way, slipped through between the leaders entering the stretch, responded gamely when the final issue came and outlasted her opposition. VICUNA, forced to race wide all the way, came with a belated rush through the stretch. QUICK CHANGE also finished strongly, but could not overhaul the leaders. KINGOO, under slight restraint early, made a bold effort at the furlong pole, but faltered in the final drive. DETAINED was bufeeted about in the opening furlong.

Daily Double—Exarch and Ideal Fungi, paid $39.20.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:08. Off at 3:09½. Winner, M. Stuart's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIG BULLY, $35.60, $16.10, $7.90; MASTER HOWARD, $43.90, $30.00; REMUS-GINA, $3.20.

BIG BULLY, keen contender all the way, responded gamely under punishment in the stretch drive and outlasted MASTER HOWARD. The latter, on the inside and in tight quarters early, moved up boldly entering the stretch, but hung in the closing strides. REMUS-GINA worked his way up steadily between the leaders, finished gamely to punishment and was wearing the leaders down at the end. CORONADO broke slowly. He saved ground entering the stretch and closed a big gap.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start poor from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:38½. Winner, Calumet Farm's b. c. Building, Autos Seen as Basis Of Prosperity

Best Balanced Outlook in 7 Years Expert Declares

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Feb. 6.—Production of an estimated 3,500,000 automobiles and an estimated total of $3,800,000,000 of building and construction contracts give 1939 the best balanced basis for prosperity in seven years, said Walter von Tresckow, president of Young & Ottley, Inc., investment management firm, in a letter to clients today.

"In observing the ups and downs of business over the years," he says, "one conclusion stands out clearly. The essential difference between prosperity and depression is the variation in the quantity of durable and semidurable goods produced. In any appraisal of the business outlook, these two activities should receive the greatest attention.

"The most important factor in the durable goods group is building and construction; in semidurable goods, automotive production. The two together tell practically the whole story.

"From 1927 through 1932, the total dollar value of building and construction contracts was 27.7 billions. From 1933 through 1938 it was only 13.6 billions. Average building and construction per year from 1927 through 1932 was 4.6 billions; from 1933 through 1938 it was only 2.3 billions.

Steady Auto Rise

"The trend of building and construction from 1928 to 1933 was downward. Since 1933 there has been a steady rise without a setback, from 1.3 billions in 1933 to 3.2 billions in 1938. Careful analysis indicates that the total building and construction contracts for 1939 will reach their highest level since 1930—3.5 billions to 3.7 billions.

"In the period from 1927 through 1932, the total wholesale dollar value of automotive production was 13.2 billions. From 1933 through 1938, it held at 11.4 billions. Compare this drop from 13.2 to 11.4 with building and construction's drop from 27.7 to 13.6. And in terms of automobiles produced, the past six years gained over 1927-1932 from a yearly average of 3.33 million cars up to 3.39 million; an overall gain from 19.9 to 20.3 million cars. The best present estimates are that 1939 will produce 3.50 million cars.

"If we review these two activities—building and construction and automotive production—over the past 12 years, we have good evidence as to what their expected 1939 performance will mean to general prosperity."

General Motors Votes 75 Cents On the Common

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Directors of General Motors Corporation today declared a dividend of 75 cents a share on common stock, payable March 13 to holders of record February 16.

Previous payment was 75 cents a common share on December 12, while in the three preceding quarters in 1938 disbursements of 25 cents a share each were made.

Directors also ordered the regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share on preferred stock, payable May 1 to holders of record April 10.

Cotton Futures A Point Lower

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Near deliveries again maintained strength in relation to distant months in the cotton futures market today when a late trade covering movement lifted closing quotations above the day's lows. Final prices were generally 1 point lower in a quiet session.

Early demand by mill interests at net advances of a point or so was soon satisfied and commission house liquidation and Bombay selling sent the market backward. Southern interests were reported moderate sellers in early afternoon. Aside from scattered foreign offerings in new crop months, interest in those deliveries was at low ebb.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures broke 18 to 21 points today to the lowest levels since August, 1934. Prices dropped under general liquidation, speculative offerings and the uncovering of stop orders. Offerings followed lower lard prices, easier crude prices and lack of improvement in demand for cash oil. Sales totaled 492 lots. March closed, 6.48; May, 6.59; July, 6.69@6.70; September, 6.76@6.77. Crude oil was nominal; sold at 5½ cents in the Southeast and valley. Texas was quoted at 5¼@5¾.

Com. Credit Net $4.60 on Common In the Past Year

Baltimore, Feb. 6.—The twenty-seventh consolidated annual report of the Commercial Credit Co. for the year ended December 31, 1938, shows gross volume of all receivables acquired was $524,345,719, compared with $933,854,331 for 1937, when the volume was the largest of any previous year in the history of the company.

Net income from operations available for consolidated interest and discount charges for 1938, after charging off losses and providing ample reserve for doubtful items, was $13,969,484, compared with $20,-719,161 for 1937. Net income from operations available for dividends, after deduction for minority interest and provision for Federal and other taxes was $8,997,363, compared with $13,593,119 for 1937.

After payment of $518,279 in dividens for 1938 on the 4¼ per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock, there remained $8,479,084, of $4.60 per share, applicable to 1,841,-992 shares, including scrip, of common stock of the company. This compares with $13,074,366, or $7.09 per share for 1937 applicable to 1,841,994 shares of common outstanding on December 31, 1937.

Wheat Prices Slip Down in Narrow Range

Drop ⅛ to ⅜ Cents Visible Supply Less Corn Also Lower

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—Wheat prices moved within a narrow and fractionally lower range today, with closing quotations ⅛ to ⅜ cents lower. The downturn here, reflecting lower quotations in other world markets, was cushioned by decrease of 3,215,000 bushels in the visible supply of United States wheat. Then, too, trading was light and a little buying support was enough to help hold up values.

With securities stronger and sentiment improved over the European political situation, world wheat prices took their customary downward course. Liverpool, due unchanged to ¼ lower, closed ⅛@½ down; Rotterdam ⅛@1⅛ off; Buenos Aires unchanged.

May declined the day's maximum of 1½ cent here, but met commission house support. There was also a little support from short covering. Wheat closed ⅛@⅜ off, May 68⅜@68¼, July 68⅜; corn ⅛@⅜ off, May 49¾@49⅝, July 50¾; oats unchanged to ⅛ off, May 28⅜; rye ⅜@⅝ off, May 45½; lard 17@20 cents off.

TVA-Utility Sale Booms Power Shares; Selling in Other Groups Shades Averages Utility Strength Features Bond Market

New York, Feb. 6.—Announcement that the TVA is ready to buy Tennessee Electric Power Co. at a fair price touched off vigorous buying in utility shares generally today, sending them to the best price levels in more than 16 months. Strength in this quarter, however, apparently afforded cover for liquidation in some other groups. As the day wore on the market became more and more irregular. Early gains were canceled in most divisions and power issues, while ahead on the day, finished well under best quotations. The 100 stocks closed 0.2 point up.

Foreign exchanges moved up a bit in terms of the dollar and some more gold was engaged for shipment from Europe to this country. Bonds were steady with utility liens following the lead of stocks. Curb bond volume, due to heavy trading in power issues, was the largest since February 20, 1936. Cotton and wheat showed only negligible changes.

Wall Street did not hedge in its bullish interpretation of the Tennessee Electric-TVA deal, in which the Government offer is $7,700,000 under appraised value, but $23,600,-000 more than the TVA's first bid, and recognizes value for common stock. In stock market circles, at any rate, the proposed purchase was interpreted as evidence of more conciliatory policy toward private utilities, with more consideration for investors in the industry.

Prognostications

At the same time, the ever-ready forecasters were emphasizing that it, as indicated, "peace" has been restored between Government and this section of business, basis has been laid for broad equipment buying. This reasoning, others pointed out however, ignored the long-term point that Government buying of existing systems is not so different from constructing new power projects; that the Tennessee electric deal stands by itself and gives no promise of a let-down in activity of the numerous little TVAs scattered around the country. Further, the Government will be losing a taxpayer and, at the same time, appropriating about $80,000,-000 of taxpayers' money for the purchase. The "fair price" policy—if it can be definitely assumed on the basis of this one deal—should improve utility credit and aid financing through stimulating the market for equity issues, but rate implications cannot be ignored. David E. Lilienthal, vice chairman of the TVA, did not waste time in announcing that within five years utility rates the country over would be down to the TVA level.

C. & S. Pfd. Up 6½

Principal issue reflecting the TVA deal in the listed market today was Commonwealth & Southern Corporation 6 per cent preferred. After sailing to a new high at 63⅛, it closed at 62½, up 6½. The common led the board in point of activity, adding ¼ point at 2⅛. Other issues of Commonwealth & Southern properties, particularly those traded over the counter, recorded gains ranging to more than a dozen points. Among these were preferred stocks and bonds of Tennessee Electric, which is to be liquidated on consummation of the deal; Georgia Power and Mississippi Power. Other high fliers included senior issues of American Power & Light and Columbia Gas & Electric.

Only a few of the popular industrial, carrier, motor, equipment, metal and aeronautical shares were included in the day's most active list. Nine of the 15 leaders were in the power division. General Motors showed strength, ending at 47¼ for a half-point gain with no indication traders expected as much as a 75-cent dividend declaration. Action by directors in this regard was announced after the close.

Oils held well in the face of opinion by the chairman of the oil states compact committee, that the refining branch of the oil industry is "running more or less wild." Figures on output and stocks of gasoline for last week will be announced late tomorrow by the American Petroleum Institute.

Power Bonds Strong

Listed bond trading was moderately cheerful today, with high grade power and light issues active and higher on the week-end developments in the TVA area. The listed issues directly concerned in the purchase promptly moved to par, but this meant only a small advance. Treasury bonds and other investment issues were in demand. Speculative rails and others had a good tone, while foreign dollar issues also showed more small gains than losses. Turnover was $6,860,000, which remains much under normal.

Attention was centered in good part on the highly rated power and light obligations, regardless of location. Tennessee Electric Power 6s advanced 1¼ points to a money market basis. Columbia Gas & Electric and Commonwealth Edison issues were active and slightly improved. Allis-Chalmers Convertible 4s reflected the better sentiment about utilities by a point gain, since this company might receive orders for equipment in any utility expansion or replacement program.

The investment section in general fared well. United States Treasury obligations moved 1-32 to 5-32 point higher on small trading, with attention centered on the new issue of RFC notes. Telephone debentures were maintained at their highs, and a similar situation prevailed in best rail and industrial mortgages.

Medium-priced railroad bonds were marked higher in most instances, and some demand was noted also for borderline and default rails. B. & O. issues were especially active. Local traction bonds were dull and lower. Rail holding bonds were quiet and little business was done in utility holding issues, other than those of the TVA section. Communications and other special groups attracted little interest.

Brazilian bonds remained firm in the foreign section, owing to the imminent arrival of Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha. Other Latin-American default bonds also were firm with the exception of Chileans. German bonds are back in their usual state of suspended animation. The Italian and Japanese groups were steady, and best grade foreigns also were maintained.

Realty Bonds Firm Despite Stock Decline

Up ½ of 1% in January Hotel and Theater Issues Lead Gains

New York, Feb. 6.—Real estate bonds in January resisted the general down trend in speculative markets and showed a gain of ½ of 1 per cent, according to the Burr Real Estate Bond Index of 250 Eastern issues, released today by Burr & Co.

In comparison with the ½ of 1 per cent increase in the realty bond market practically all other speculative indexes showed sharp down trends. For example, the Dow-Jones industrial averages declined by over 7 per cent in January, rail stock averages by 12 per cent and second grade rail bond averages by about 4½ per cent.

There is a streng undertone of confidence in the near term outlook for realty bond markets according to Burr & Co. analysts because of the maintenance of earning power and bond interest payments during the last year. With at least partial clearing up of January uncertainties, an upward trend in realty bond markets may confidently be anticipated, particularly with respect to the New York City properties, such as hotels and theaters, which will receive a tremendous earning stimulus from the World's Fair to commence within the next three months.

During January the hotel and theater issues covered by the Burr index showed the largest percentage increases of the main types of property with a 2.2 per cent gain for hotel issues and 1.9 per cent for theater issues. Both the hotel and theater groups broke into new high ground for 1938-1939 during January.

A recent analysis of these realty bonds by Burr & Co. indicated a steady increase in the average rate of interest return and showed that based on 1938 interest payments a current yield of about 8½ per cent is available in the realty bond field.

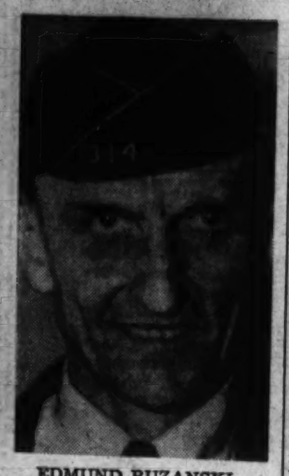
Engineer Seeks Congress' Aid In Getting Wife Out of Russia

TAMARA RUZANSKI.



EDMUND RUZANSKI.

American Renews Efforts to Win Mate's Release, Promised Last July; Couple Parted Since 1935

Separated from his Russian-born wife for more than three years because the Soviet government won't let her leave Russia, Edmund Ruzanski, of River Rouge, Mich., has come to Washington for the second time in a year to enlist Congressional aid in his fight for her release.

Last here in May, 1938, Ruzanski wanted to picket the Soviet embassy bearing a sign saying, "Soviet Government Not Fair to American Worker." Learning of Washington's embassy picketing law, he abandoned this idea, and appealed to Michigan Congressmen for aid.

Their intercession with the Soviet embassy on Ruzanski's behalf elicited a communication last July from the People's Commissariat of Foreign Affairs to the American embassy in Moscow to the effect that Mrs. Ruzanski's plea to renounce Soviet citizenship would be approved, but no date was given. The statement was repeated by the commissariat on December 7, 1938.

Ruzanski is an American citizen of Polish parentage, who went to Russia in 1931 to work. While employed as a marine engineer in Baku, on the Caspian sea, he married a Russian girl. When he left Russia in October, 1935, he was told his wife would be allowed to follow as soon as he had established residence in America.

The necessary arrangements for Mrs. Ruzanski's entrance to the United States as a non-quota immigrant have been made, her passage has been paid and money for other expenses posted with the American Consul in Warsaw, Poland. Only the permission of the Soviet Government is lacking for the couple to be reunited.

Hoping that intercession of Congress will be more effectual than the efforts of the Michigan Congressmen last year, Ruzanski will confer with Senator Vandenberg tomorrow.

Although he recognizes that there is no means by which Congress can force the Soviet government to release his wife, Ruzanski hopes to introduce a petition appealing to Congress to take whatever steps possible.

Ruzanski served in the Navy during the World War, enlisting the day after war was declared in 1917. He is now employed by the Ford Motor Co.

Legal Notices

FRED J. RICE, Attorney, Investment Building.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Glenn S. Mentzer, plaintiff, vs. Beatrice M. Mentzer, defendant. Civil Action No. 723. The object of this suit is to get an absolute divorce from the defendant, Beatrice M. Mentzer, on the grounds of voluntary separation from bed and board for five consecutive years without cohabitation. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 30th day of January, 1939, ordered that the defendant, Beatrice M. Mentzer, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default, provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post before said day. JENNINGS BAILEY, Justice. Attest: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By JOHN O. BOWEN, Assistant Clerk. 31,7,14

WILLIAM E. RICHARDSON, Attorney.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. In re: DISSOLUTION OF MONTGOMERY BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION, a corporation. Equity No. 86434. FINAL NOTICE OF FILING CLAIMS.

Notice is hereby given, pursuant to the order of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, dated February 3, 1939, that all claimants who have not heretofore filed their claims with Julius I. Peyser, receiver of the Montgomery Building and Loan Association, are required to file the same with said receiver on or before the 6th day of March, 1939, and that all claimants failing to file claims in accordance with the notices heretofore given or the notice hereby given, shall be bound by all of the orders, proceedings and judgment in said case and by all proceedings which may have occurred prior to their appearance, by filing claims, or otherwise, in said case, but the failure to file claims shall not prevent the allowance and payment of their proof of claim of whatever sum the receiver, subject to the direction of the court, may find to be due them according to the records of said building association.

Blank forms for the filing of claims by creditors, depositors, stockholders and certificate holders, and instructions for preparing the same, may be obtained at the office of the undersigned receiver.

JULIUS I. PEYSER, Receiver of Montgomery Building and Loan Association. 1039 Investment Building, Fifteenth and K streets northwest, Washington, D. C. 7,14

Auction Sales

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1939—
ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF VALUABLE REAL ESTATE, 7TH STREET, S. E., 6-ROOM BRICK HOUSE.

By virtue of a deed of trust recorded in Liber No 5873, folio 248, et seq., one of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will offer for sale by public auction, in front of premises, on THURSDAY, THE SIXTEENTH DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1939, AT 4:30 O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described property in the District of Columbia, to-wit: Lot 11 in William Williams's subdivision of lots in Square 898, as per plat recorded in Book W. B. M., page 377, in the Surveyor's Office of the District of Columbia.

TERMS OF SALE: One-fourth of the purchase-money to be paid in cash, balance in equal installments, represented by promissory notes of purchaser payable in one, two and three years, with interest at 6 per cent per annum from day of sale, payable semiannually, secured by first deed of trust upon property sold, or all cash, at option of purchaser. A deposit of $300.00 required of purchaser at sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms to be complied with within 15 days from day of sale, otherwise trustees reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

East and West of today's hand fervently wished that either North or South had passed out of turn and been barred before they reached six hearts, for, although the contract should not have been made, luck and strategy combined to achieve the impossible.

The hand was played by Louis P. Frank, attorney. His partner was Abram Chastins, pianist.

In order to win his slam contract when he had to lose a trump trick and an ace, Frank led low from his ace of trumps toward the jack in his own hand with both the king and queen outstanding. He planned to place the lead with the adversary who lacked the ace, hoping for a favorable return.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 NT.	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 5 ◇

Such an irregular play could not be conceived by the adversaries, and good distribution plus the looked-for lead sealed Frank's success.

This is the way he describes it:

"Last evening I played perhaps the luckiest hand that I can remember. My partner, Abram Chastins, who plays bridge as well as he does the piano, and that is saying a lot, was sitting North. The bidding on my part was quite optimistic, as I could have passed my partner's four no-trump bid, and I had resigned myself to being set at least one.

"West led the five of diamonds, and I saw that the only chance to make the contract was to find East with the queen and another heart and the spade ace, and that I must coax a club rather than a spade lead from West.

"The first trick was taken by South with the diamond ace, and the return of the diamond jack was won by North's king. North led a small heart. East's nine was covered by South's ten, and West's king won the trick. West having no more diamonds and figuring South for the spade ace because of his spade bid, played the club deuce. East covered with the jack and South's king won. South led a small heart and played North's ace, catching East's queen. North led a trump which was taken by South's jack. South led the club four, finessing the club nine, which held. North's two high clubs and two high diamonds afforded four spade discards for South."

The Federal Diary

By Christine Sadler
(Substituting for Scott Hart)

AS A PRELUDE to Washington's Birthday, the National Park Service announces an illustrated lecture Wednesday night in the Departmental Auditorium on "Washington's Birthplace." It will be given by Philip R. Hough, superintendent of George Washington Birthplace National Monument.

In addition to "Wakefield," which is attracting visitors from many countries—and is a drive of only 2½ hours from Washington—other historic homes and churches of the Old Dominion will be shown.

ART OR NOT, the paintings which formerly adorned corridor walls at the Department of Labor are going back—just as soon as the repainted walls have dried.

They're part of the lot turned up in recent years by the Government's art projects. Somebody has to take them, they can't be sold. Members of Lodge No. 228, A. F. G. E., who asked that they not be put back, shouldn't feel too badly. They're so much better than some to be found in other Federal buildings.

THE UNITED FEDERAL WORKERS OF AMERICA calls attention to three bills now before the House—one to extend classification provisions to all Federal employes working on a permanent basis, one to set up machinery for handling Government employe grievances, and one to establish a minimum wage of $1,200 for all Government employes.

The last measure differs from other minimum wage bills designed to benefit Government employes in that it would reach the low-salaried, common-labor person. There are more than 30,000 Federal workers making less than $900 a year, the U. F. W. A. estimates.

IN THE SHIFTING about of Department of Agriculture men to provide a new top personnel for the Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation, two more selections have been announced.

Edwin W. Gaumnitz, who has been chief of the dairy section of the marketing division, has become director of the division of marketing and marketing agreements. Philip F. Maguire, who has been with the AAA since 1933, is now vice president of FSCC and will work directly with Milo R. Perkins, new FSCC chief.

IN THE NEXT several weeks, the FSCC will undertake purchase of 8,000,000 boxes of citrus fruits for distribution to relief clients.

The fruit will be taken off the market in Texas, California and Florida and will serve as an addition to relief families' supplies, not as a substitute. While purpose is to relieve glutted markets, FSCC regards the move as a step toward a more healthful diet for relief clients, most of whom never get fruits of this kind.

The purchase will include 5,000,000 boxes of grapefruit and 3,000,000 boxes of oranges.

Bob Burns Says—

I got a barber out here in Hollywood who still likes to give the real old-fashioned Arkansas haircut. You know, the kind where they turn a bowl or an old crock upside down on your head an' trim around the edges? If there's a nick in the dish, there's more hair missin' in that spot.

Grandpa Snazzy, every time he visits me, won't take no other kind of a haircut. He claims that puttin' a piece of crockery over his dome is the only thing that's protected him from baldness. "Too much cuttin' on top thins out the crop," he says. The other day, Grandpa Snazzy spots an old gent in the park with a scrumptious head of hair . . . an' they get to making comparisons.

"Worry is what kills hair," declares Grandpa, waxin' eloquent. "But you—you, my dear sir, have got the finest head of hair I ever seen for a man your age."

"Yep," said the old gent, takin' off his toupee. "An' it's cost me a pretty penny, too."

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

What Whitey Saw

You can't do otherwise than mind.

Whitey the Snowy Owl, who lives in the Far North where snow and ice prevail for the greater part of the year, is a stout-hearted fellow. He does not give up easily. Up where he lives, as in most places, there are times of plenty and times of starvation. The latter are hard times indeed, for they come at the time of year when Whitey sees little but snow and ice, and Jack Frost rules supreme. He rules without mercy.

Now even way up there there is a summer season, a short one but while it lasts grasses and many kinds of plants grow rapidly. Some feathered folk fly way up there to nest and there are others, and also folk in fur, who live there all year around. Among these are members of the Mouse family. Some of the smaller ones are called Lemming Mice and some a little bit larger and stouter than Danny Meadow Mouse are called Lemmings. Of the latter there is one kind that in winter has a white coat, and a cousin who keeps a brown coat all winter.

Grasses and seeds and plants of various kinds are the food of the Lemmings, just as they are of Meadow Mice. For several years there had been good crops of grasses and other plants and Lemmings had thrived and raised many and big families. Of course, the greater the number of Lemmings the more food they ate and by and by there came a time when there was danger that there would not be enough food for all the Lemmings if all remained where they were and they continued to raise big families.

Now at such a time Old Mother Nature takes a hand. She did this time. She filled a lot of those Lemmings with the desire to move; to go somewhere else; to seek new feeding grounds. They didn't know just why they must move on. All they knew was that something inside, a force they couldn't resist, urged them to go on and to let nothing stop them. First a few felt it and started to move in search of a new country. At least it would be such to them. And as they moved along others joined. There seemed to be something contagious about that compelling force. The small company became a big company, and the big company became an army, and the army became a horde. Over a great area the ground became alive with Lemmings, all pushing forward in one direction, eating as they went, making no attempt to keep under cover, stopping at nothing. If they came to a water in they plunged and swam. Very many drowned, but this did not check the onward march. Always those behind crowded forward those in front.

All this Whitey the Snowy Owl, who lived near where that great march started, saw and never will forget. Those were fat days for Whitey and for all his relatives and others for a great distance. News of the great march traveled fast and far. The northern cousins of Reddy Fox, which are the Arctic Foxes, and the Blue Foxes, the great northern cousins of Howler the Wolf, and many other of eaters of meat followed that great army of Lemmings and grew fat with good living.

Now not quite all the Lemmings at the starting point and along the line of march joined the seekers for new feeding grounds. You know how it is when a contagious disease sweeps through a neighborhood, there are always some who escape. So there were a few, a very few, Lemmings who remained. They did not feel that irresistible impulse to go. So they hid and remained. And because now there were so few to be fed there was plenty of food.

After a time the Owls and the Foxes and the other hunters who had followed and fattened on the Lemmings drifted back to their own neighborhoods for after all the homeland is, and must always be, home. And the full-fed and fat hunters little dreamed of what lay ahead for them. Mother Nature's children live in the present.

Chest to Name 110 Trustees Tonight

Cites Need for Further Aid for Children on Eve of Annual Meeting

One hundred and twenty-seven years ago today Charles Dickens was born, creator of the child character, Oliver Twist, the boy who asked for "more." Today there are 500 Oliver Twists in the nine child welfare institutions in Washington supported by the Community Chest, but they get their second helpings without having to ask for them. The 190,000 contributors to the eleventh annual Community Chest campaign last year have seen to that, the Chest reports.

Far From Complete

But the work is still far from complete, the Chest announced yesterday. There are only two convalescent homes for children in Washington, the Children's Country Home at Eighteenth and Bunker Hill road northeast, and the Christ Child Farm for Convalescent Children, Rockville, with a combined capacity of 80 children. The need for increased facilities was recently pointed out by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at a meeting of the Council of Social Agencies of the Chest.

The seven other children's homes supported by the Chest, caring for a total of 434 children, are Episcopal Home for Children Nebraska and Utah avenues northwest, with 75 children; Jewish Foster Home, 3213 Q street northwest, 15 children; St. Ann's Infant Asylum, 2300 K street northwest, 94 children; St. Joseph's Home and School, Eastern avenue and Bunker Hill road, 78 children; St. Rose's Technical School, 2200 California street northwest, 92 children; St. Vincent's Home and School, Fourth and Channing streets northeast, 75 children, and Washington Home for Foundlings, 4610 Forty-second street northwest, 45 children.

Annual Meeting Tonight

The Community Chest will hold its annual meeting in the Hall of Flags of the United States Chamber of Commerce tonight at 8 o'clock, attended by delegates from Government departments, civic and social organizations and business firms, as well as individual contributors. One hundred and ten trustees will be elected to represent the contributors, and a short play, "Lengthening Shadows," will be presented to dramatize what would happen to the needy if the Chest did not help them.

Dominicans Open Port to U. S. Navy

Special Cable to The Post.

San Juan, P. R., Feb. 6.—The government of the Dominican Republic today authorized the American Navy to use Samana Bay, on the eastern Dominican coast, during fleet maneuvers, and also permitted American military and naval planes to land anywhere in Dominican territory or waters.

The decree was regarded here as a refutation of reports the republic was sympathetic to exploitation by Germans.

Court Orders Mother to Return Child

Divorcee in Contempt For Keeping Son in N. Y. Since September

Because she has kept her 3½-year-old son in New York since September 17, despite a ruling giving the child into the custody of his father, Blanche Kirsch Himmighoefer yesterday was declared guilty of contempt of court and ordered to return the child here immediately.

According to a divorce ruling of June 8, 1938, the baby, Walter Clark Himmighoefer, would be left with the father, Walter H. Himmighoefer, grocery store clerk, who lives at 814 Decatur street northwest. The mother was to have the child from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. one day a week.

W. Dennis Hollowell and Ford E. Young, attorneys for Himmighoefer, said their client had made a special, but futile, trip to New York to obtain the child. Mrs. Himmighoefer, they said, had secured an indictment against her former husband in Oswego, N. Y., on charges of "abandoning an infant child."

Himmighoefer will appear at District Court on February 16 to fight extradition proceedings, Hollowell said.

By the ruling yesterday by Justice O. R. Luhring, Himmighoefer is released from his former responsibility of paying his wife $25 a month alimony, which he discontinued when Mrs. Himmighoefer took the child.

Mrs. Minnie Divine Dies at Arlington

Minnie R. Divine, widow of Luther M. Divine, died Sunday at her residence, 2617 Columbia Pike, Arlington. Mr. Divine, an employe of the Government Printing Office, died in February of last year. She is survived by a niece, Mrs. Elizabeth Main Mark, of Mount Jackson, Va., and a nephew, the Rev. W. Clark Main, of Arlington; a sister, Mrs. Nettie Main Mantz, and a niece, Mrs. Rebecca Mantz Chapman, both of Washington. Funeral will be held at her residence at 10:30 a. m. today.

Steiwer Funeral Held at Arlington

Frederick Steiwer, former Senator from Oregon, was buried yesterday with full military honors in Arlington National Cemetery.

Hundreds of mourners attended services at Fort Myer Chapel, conducted by the Rev. Ze Barney Phillips, chaplain of the Senate. Heading honorary pallbearers was Vice President Garner.

Col. Tompkins, Veteran Indian Fighter, Dies

Native of D. C., He Retired in '37 After 43 Years in Army

Col. Selah R. H. (Tommy) Tompkins, Indian fighter and veteran of the Mexico border skirmishes, died Sunday at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., it was learned here yesterday. The 76-year-old District native was retired in 1937 after 43 years' Army service.

COL. TOMPKINS

Col. Tompkins, whose biting language and pinkish mustachio and beard became a tradition in the Army, joined the Seventh Infantry in 1884, but two years later transferred to the Seventh Cavalry, with which he served most of his career. In 1916 Col. Tompkins was awarded the Silver Star Citation for gallantry in action against Villa's forces near Guerrero, Mexico.

Born here within a stone's throw of the War Department, "Col. Pinkwhiskers," as he was belovedly known, was the son of Gen. G. H. Tompkins, a Civil War officer who led the charge on the Fairfax (Va.) courthouse. His ancestors had been cavalrymen for seven generations.

The colonel always believed with the dictionary that the word "cavalry" meant "mounted troops." He strongly opposed motorizing cavalry units.

Apropos of Tompkins' salty temperament is the story dealing with 400 cavalry recruits sent him in the Philippines. He was ordered to mold them into a fighting unit. After a few weeks his superior wrote asking how the task was progressing. Tompkins replied:

"I have 400 men who had never seen a horse, and 400 horses that had never seen a man and 12 officers who had never seen man or horse. Now what can I do?"

Wachtel to Address Ad Club Tomorrow

W. W. Wachtel, of New York, will speak tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. at the luncheon of the Advertising Club in the Williard Hotel. He will speak on "Fair Trade or Bankruptcy."

Utility Rating On 'Fair Value' Scored in Court

By the Associated Press.

The Administration renewed in the Supreme Court yesterday its advocacy of the "prudent investment" theory of valuing public utilities for rate-making purposes.

Solicitor General Jackson filed a brief as a "friend of the court" in connection with arguments next Wednesday on validity of a rate order by the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission against the Edison Light & Power Co., operating at and near York, Pa.

He asked the tribunal to reconsider a decision, followed for 41 years, that both reproduction and original costs must be considered in determining the value of utilities.

U.S. Studies Trade Loss to Dictators In Latin America

By the Associated Press.

The Tariff Commission is studying encroachment of foreign-made products upon United States exports to Latin America.

Sidney Morgan, commission secretary, so advised a House sub-committee at hearings, made public yesterday, on the independent offices appropriation bill.

A reference to increased sales of German and Italian planes in South America, at the expense of American aircraft, brought from Morgan a statement that it showed "what an effort is being made by our competitors to get all the trade they can."

Randolph Cites Gallinger Need; CheersOfficials

Action Expected To Improve Conditions At City Hospital

Positive action to improve conditions at Gallinger Hospital, where a colored man broke loose Sunday and terrorized the psycopathic ward, was foreshadowed by a letter from Representative Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, to Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of the hospital, made public yesterday.

In the letter, dated February 4, the day before the incident, Representative Randolph asked for a detailed report on the needs of the hospital, expressing his concern over reports reaching him of the inadequacy of the hospital staff, the low standard of the food served to patients and doctors, the overcrowding of the wards and the condition of the tuberculosis houses, which he described as "a disgrace to a city of this size and type."

"I feel that it is time we recognized the desperate need for an adequate city hospital and believe definite steps should be taken to place our medical facilities here in Washington at least on a par with other leading cities of this country," the letter continued.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, declared he was delighted in the interest Representative Randolph was taking in the hospital, and said he expected "this would lead to real tangible progress."

U. S. Attorneys Protect Aliens Dies Charges

Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, told the Supreme Court yesterday that Justice and Labor Department lawyers were attempting in the Strecker case to get a judgment protecting "other aliens against whom deportation proceedings are now pending."

The chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities filed a brief as a "friend of the court" in connection with oral arguments late this week on the validity of a deportation order against Austrian-born Joseph G. Strecker, of Hot Springs, Ark., an admitted former member of the Communist Party.

Mrs. Moreland Funeral Today

C. W. Young, Tariff Commission Expert on Far East, Dies at 37

C. Walter Young, 37, economist for the Tariff Commission, died suddenly yesterday at his home, 103 Woodridge avenue, Silver Spring.

C. W. YOUNG

Known as an authority in economics and political science and an expert in Far Eastern affairs, he had been with the Tariff Commission since 1936. Previously he had been associated with the Institute of Current World Affairs, New York. Mr. Young had attended Northwestern and Johns Hopkins universities and those of Heidelberg and Leyden. He held a doctor of philosophy degree and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, honorary fraternity.

In 1928 he came to Washington as an instructor in political science at George Washington University. Later he studied three years at Peking, China, on a Willard Straight Fellowship.

He was a member of the United States delegation to the Kyoto Conference in Japan in 1929 and in 1931 he served on the Lord Lytton Commission investigating conditions in Manchuria. Several textbooks on Manchuria and Northern China written by Mr. Young are in use in colleges.

He leaves his wife, Gladys Hildreth Young; a daughter Constance H. Young and his father, Karl Young, of Canby, Minn. Funeral and burial will be at Canby Saturday.

Mrs. Willingham's Funeral Set Today

Services for Mrs. Martha Ellen Willingham, 66, widow of Charles H. Willingham, will be held at the residence, 7502 Alaska avenue northwest, at 10 a. m. today, the Rev. Dr. W. F. Johnson, pastor of the Grace Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Remington, Va.

Mrs. Willingham died Sunday. Surviving are five sons, William A., Raymond L., Carl H., Frank L., and Clifton R. Willingham, and a daughter, Mrs. Edith Wallace.

McCrea Funeral At 2 P. M. Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Cora McCrea, widow of Capt. Henry McCrea, U. S. N., will be held at 2 p. m., today at St. Paul's Church, the Rev. Dr. Arlington A. McCallum officiating. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mrs. McCrea died Saturday after a long illness at the Home for Incurables.

She was for many years librarian of the Washington Club.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend presents her 111th Musical Morning on Monday in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom. Artists: Lauritz Melchior, tenor; Orlando Barera, violinist; Ignaz Strasfogel and Paul Ulanovski, accompanists.

Disappointment faced those who had looked forward to hearing Lotte Lehmann sing yesterday at Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's last Musical Morning of the season in a joint recital with Lauritz Melchior. Mme. Lehmann had arrived in Washington Sunday evening apparently in the best of health, but the morning found her suffering from a laryngitis which made it impossible for her to speak above a whisper. The recital was to have been her first appearance in public since the recent tragic loss of her husband. She returned at once to New York for treatment by her physician.

Unable to find a substitute soprano at such short notice, Mrs. Townsend was fortunate in securing the services of Orlando Barera, the young Italian violinist, who chanced to be in the city on his way to an engagement in Jacksonville. His accompanist and his music had preceded him southward, but a program was quickly selected from what music he had with him, and Paul Ulanovski, Mme. Lehmann's accompanist, volunteered to assist him. This impromptu arrangement, contrived between 8 and 11 o'clock, enabled the recital to proceed.

Lauritz Melchior, resonant in voice and impressive in presence, sang with his accustomed command of dramatic cogency. Supreme as a Wagnerian heldentenor of the finest type, he has splendid resources of plangent tone and an artistic surety in their use. He opened the program with four songs in Danish, Finnish, and Norwegian: Lembcke's "Majsang," "Stille mit Hjerte" by Ilmari Hannikainen, "Februar ved Goefen" by Eyvind Alnaes, and "Hoerer du" by Sverre Jordan.

In his second group were Richard Trunk's "Mir traemte von einem Koenigskind," Eugene Hildach's "Lenz" and two lieder by Richard Strauss: "Heimliche Aufforderung" and "Caecilie." As an extra number he sang Grieg's "Jeg elsker Dig." His concluding group contained Wagner's "Schmerzen" and "Traeume," and "Winterstuerme wichen" from "Die Walkuere." To these he added for encores Walter Branson's "Music of the Spring" and Frank La Forge's "Into the Light."

Orlando Barera, who was introduced here three years ago by Mrs. Townsend, is a musician of engaging qualities. His unobtrusive technique, skillful and facile, and his persuasive tone were well displayed in an adagio by Porpora, an arietta by Martini, one of Dvorak's Slavonic dances, the adagio movement from Vieuxtemps' fourth concerto, Vieniavski's "Tarantelle" and Kreisler's "Viennese Caprice."

John Mafvill conducts the choir of Hamline Methodist Episcopal Church in a performance of Saint-Saens' "Le Deluge." Soloists: Ethel Stickles, Mabel Flehr, John Murphy and John Marville.. Organist. Lyman S. McCrary; pianist, Beth King.

Unknown to most music-lovers, save for the prelude which frequently appears on orchestral programs, Saint-Saens' cantata, "Le Deluge," was revived for the choir of Hamline Methodist Episcopal Church by John Marville, in a performance marked by well-trained choral work and capable singing of the solo parts. An arrangement of the instrumental score for organ and piano was effectively handled by Lyman S. McCrary and Beth King.

Not a masterpiece by any standard of measurement, "Le Deluge" exemplifies the versatility of Camille Saint-Saens, who tried his hand at every type of composition from piano pieces to symphonies, and from lyric songs to operas. Nothing that he attempted was badly done, for he had mastery of technique and an impeccable sense of style, but a great deal of his music lacks the glow of inner fervor.

That is the case with this cantata which is little more than routine writing on a religious subject. As far as its feeling of conviction is concerned, it might just as well have been cast in the form of a symphonic poem. While the choral writing is deft and effective, and the dramatic points are securely made, the music is more academic than sincere in expression.

For this impression, experienced 62 years after the work was composed, Saint-Saens has no one but himself to blame. Emotion and inspiration had no place in his artistic credo, and he specifically denied their validity. He was wont to say that he wrote music "as an apple tree produces apples." Unfortunately, an apple tree does not always bear perfect fruit.
